Likes 'French buff'

Dear Editor:

I was completely shocked after having read the article in the July 26 Pine Cone in which the Carmel Planning Commission criticized the restoration of the Copes' La Playa Hotel. Such harassment is totally unjustified. The color "French buff" is most pleasing to the eye, blending as it does from the tile to ground in perfect harmony. As for the landscaping, left to the Copes' obvious good taste, that too would have an equally harmonious effect had they been permitted to complete their plans.

How the Carmel Planning Commission has the unmitigated gall to think they can sit in judgment and, worse still, make decisions on matters of esthetic beauty is utterly incomprehensible — when quite obviously they are completely content with the two portable johns in the library parking lot, all of which are enhanced by the regular visit of the nauseating sump pumps! One cannot help but wonder what the reactions of the Pine Inn and Tally Ho guests must be!

It is glaringly evident that there are city matters of far greater importance that should be resolved. Why don't they attack them with equal zeal?

Dog owners' lobby

Dear Editor:

I have been, and still am, completely disgusted with the Carmel City Council for generating all of their new fascist rules on Carmel Beach. Their wire fence only needs a little barbed wire and a few karate expert cretins to enforce their fascist restrictions on public property. I get very upset every time I hear or read about these illustrious egocentrics trying to outlaw walking our dogs on Carmel Beach.

I intend to form a dog-owners' association to counteract the effects of a few self-centered egomaniacs who think their self-righteous attitude should be the only standard for Carmel Beach. I would even consider starting a lawsuit against the city of Carmel just to protect the dog owners' freedom to walk our dogs on the sand under verbal control.

The existing law pertaining to dogs is a little unrealistic and I believe it should be amended to allow for verbal control beyond 25 feet. The doctors who have proclaimed dog poo to be a health problem have made it against the law for my dogs to have a bowel movement, as they say.

That sphincter is analogous to what I think of these people. I can't have any sympathy for educated people who demand to have their way, and only their way, on our public property. Carmel Beach should be left alone just as it is, and the ugly fence should be removed yesterday. It should never be replaced because our feet do not destroy the cliff area.

I wish those out-of-town specialists would just pack up their carpet bags and go back to the city. I do hope that the people in the Carmel City Council realize that dog-owners must have a beach where dogs can perform their constitutional and that their pooper-scooper law is stupid. It should be repealed.

One of my dogs is recovering from an operation so that I have not been to Carmel Beach for almost one week. But I will be there soon and if some over-zealous, dog-hating cretin wants to go to court with me because my dog had a bowel movement, then I want them to know that I have been ready for them for years. And I will not be the first to fight it out in court because a lot of dog owners feel the same way that I do about Carmel Beach and all of these new restrictions. Dog owners must form a lobbying group before the politician-quacks make it impossible for dog owners to seek representation.

An 'Old World' color

Dear Editor:

Although I often do concur with the local governing policies, I am having a great deal of trouble digesting the Carmel Planning Commission stand on the La Playa Hotel paint color.

I do not understand why someone who is not a professional color consultant is qualified to make such a judgment. Anyone who has traveled in Europe will recognize what an Old World color has been applied to the La Playa Hotel. This is also a color that will only improve as it ages and oxidizes, whereas the proposed white will only gray down.

I do not know Mr. Cope, but judging by his other well-known projects, I feel that Carmel is quite fortunate to have him investing in the remodeling of this landmark and doing it in such a tasteful and understanding manner.

I think it is time to put local politics aside and work toward solving problems in a professional way.

Is it possible?

Dear Editor:

Is it really possible that we have a president of the United States who twice in the same week can joke about bombing the Russians and then call those millions of us with a minimal sensitivity to human survival who are for a nuclear freeze jackasses?

This is the kind of talk and behavior one might expect from a redneck backwoods politico or a tinpot banana republic dictator, but for someone occupying an office held by George Washington and Abraham Lincoln it is simply intolerable.

Richard Nixon at his worst was nothing compared to this latest degradation of the American dream.

COMSAT answers charges

Dear Editor:

Some misleading information has been appearing in the press in recent weeks regarding the planned expansion of the COMSAT Jamesburg Earth Station in Cachagua Valley.

COMSAT is not a government agency but is, in fact, a shareholder-owned corporation engaged in providing commercial satellite communications services. The Jamesburg Earth Station is not a military installation nor is it "patrolled by guards with guard dogs," and its remote location hardly qualifies it as "a blight to everyone entering the Valley."

The dump site mentioned in a recent newspaper letter existed before COMSAT owned the property. COMSAT eliminated the dump facility and, at our request, the Monterey County Department of Health conducted a thorough investigation of the site for possible toxic wastes and found none present.

Complaints that the COMSAT expansion would create undue traffic problems have been exaggerated. The primary haul route will be via the less-traveled Greenfield entrance, rather than through Carmel Valley Village. According to the environmental impact report prepared on the proposed expansion, the "overall impact on traffic congestion will be insignificant."

Carmel 'Seawallgate' calls for answers

CARMEL, it seems, now has its own city hall foulup which, for lack of any better term, could be designated "Seawallgate."

As detailed in last week's issue, the City of Carmel has asked the Coastal Commission to exclude a 200-by-25 foot seawall constructed on private property from the city beach rehabilitation project because of liability and maintenance concerns.

To summarize what happened:

- The Carmel City Council approved the first phase of a $1-million beach rehabilitation project for submission to the Coastal Commission in August of 1983 — with no reference to a seawall on the McFarland property.

- On Oct. 12, 1983, Carmel Planning Director Robert Griggs approved a building permit for the McFarland wall.

- On Nov. 15, 1983, the Coastal Commission approved the Carmel Beach rehabilitation project — with the McFarland seawall plans attached as part of the city project and without the prior knowledge of the city council.

- In April of 1984, after construction of the seawall, city officials sought engineering information from McFarland about possible structural defects in the wall.

- On April 19, 1984, McFarland submitted an engineer's report on his seawall that omitted relevant portions of a three-month-old engineering study detailing the potential for structural failure. A full copy of the engineering report, obtained by the city from an anonymous outside source, revealed the full extent of deficiencies in the wall.

- In May, Planning Director Robert Griggs announced his resignation from the city after 17 years of service.

- On Aug. 7, 1984, the Carmel City Council asked the Coastal Commission to exclude the McFarland seawall from the city project, since a study by the city engineer had revealed the wall was on private — not city — property.

Carmel City Administrator Douglas Schmitz has said the usual city review and approval procedure for the seawall was bypassed and that it was never considered by the beach task force, the design review committee, the planning Opponents have hinted at a microwave radiation hazard at Jamesburg. However, it has been scientifically substantiated in the EIR that no microwave radiation hazard exists now, nor would it exist after the facility expansion. This data is contained in the EIR, which is available to the public.

Speeding on Junipero

Dear Editor:

Speaking of speeding on Scenic, how commission, or the the city council.

Schmitz also revealed that other city employees had spent several months unraveling what had happened, and would say only that Griggs' involvement was a "personnel matter." At one time, Schmitz added, a copy of the full engineering report that noted structural defects in the wall was in the possession of Griggs but could not be located upon later investigation.

SERIOUS questions have been raised as a result of this situation that cry out for answers. The appearance of favoritism toward McFarland or his agents is clear.

However, both Griggs and McFarland in interviews with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook this week deny any wrongdoing. Griggs said his resignation last May was over differing opinions on management of the city — and not mismanagement of the McFarland project.

Ultimate responsibility for the proper functioning of city offices of course rests with the city council. In this case, however, the city council knew nothing about what was happening because no one in city government, with the exception of Griggs it appears, knew about approval of the seawall or its full engineering story until after it was constructed.

And the immediate, day-to-day responsibility for oversight of such administrative matters rests with the city administrator, who evidently was as much in the dark on this as the council.

The public is entitled to know whether there was a deliberate attempt to gain approval for the seawall without the prior knowledge of the city council and planning commission. Although Griggs has stated city codes at the time he approved the the seawall did not require city review of a residential wall, prudence and consideration would have indicated local review of a 200-by-25 foot seawall.

Also, the city council and city administrator should get to the bottom of what went wrong and how this kind of bureaucratic bungling could have happened, so that it will not be repeated.

about speeding on Junipero now that folks and truck drivers have discovered it as an alternative to the crowded Highway 1.

This is supposed to be a residential street and I feel for the residents of Scenic. But they, I hardly believe, have the added horror of heavily laden trucks barreling along at 65 m.p.h., as we do.

Mrs. Arnold had better look the situation over more carefully.

And could the residents of San Francisco and Pacific Grove please desist telling us how to run things here? I am bored to death with their opinions about beaches, dogs, et al.

And so much for that. Thank you.

NEW PLANS for the Harrison Memorial Library annex envision more of an expansion of the existing building rather than an actual annex, according to architect Don Goodhue's perception of the project. Above is how the expanded library would be seen from Ocean Avenue looking north.

New plans for library annex unveiled

ARCHITECT Don Goodhue has unveiled new plans for a Harrison Memorial Library annex. But his latest proposal is more like an expansion, with 6,600 sq. ft. on two levels joined with the main building by a pedestrian bridge.

Goodhue presented his plans to an enthusiastic library board of trustees Aug. 28. Goodhue said the estimated cost of the project is $1.2 million, approximately the same as proposed for the original 8,000 sq. ft. annex site on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

Now the city will advertise for a consulting firm to prepare an environmental impact report on the expansion. Meanwhile, negotiations with Pine Inn are expected to resume.

Pine Inn must approve the city use of the right-of-way on Lincoln Street before the annex can be constructed on that street between Ocean and Sixth avenues.

A pathway between the expanded building and the Pine Inn shops would connect Sixth and Ocean avenues in Goodhue's plan.

There also is a plan to add nine 20-minute parking spaces to replace those lost along Lincoln Street.

Goodhue proposes that once Lincoln Street is closed, the areas where it intersects with Ocean and Sixth avenues could be curbed and used for diagonal parking.

That concept would add six parking spaces. It also is recommended that three one-hour spaces along Ocean Avenue be converted to 20-minute zones.

One of the major complaints merchants have about the expansion plan is that it would eliminate the nine 20-minute spaces along Lincoln Street.

The addition also would not destroy the existing courtyard area that fronts the main building.

Goodhue envisions a new wing that would have one level facing Pine Inn, with the second story closer to the second level of the existing building.

The two buildings then would be connected by a pedestrian bridge on the second stories. The main entrance would be relocated to the first floor of the annex facing the existing courtyard.

The first level entrance is favored by the city as a way to provide easier access to the library for elderly and handicapped patrons.

Library Director Peg Richter pointed out that Goodhue's plan is a "concept" that will be refined upon further studies and discussions with the city council.

And there are no concrete proposals for which departments would be relocated to the expanded section of the library, she said.

"We think of it as two empty boxes and then we'll go from there," Ms. Richter said.

McFarland, Griggs deny any seawall culpability

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CRAIG MCFARLAND says there has been no wrongdoing involved in the construction of his seawall on Carmel Beach designed to protect his property and multi-million dollar home formerly owned by actor Gene Hackman.

McFarland's statements also are supported by Carmel Planning Director Robert Griggs, who oversaw the permit process for the $170,000 seawall.

Carmel City Administrator Doug Schmitz recently revealed that the city wants to divest itself of any legal liabilities for the wall.

Schmitz and other officials also have questioned how the seawall got constructed filled sandbags united with metal bars are more costly, yet more safe than riprap.

- Only a portion of the wall is on city property and that land formerly belonged to him. McFarland donated that beach easement and a nearby lot to the city. Some of the seawall is on that easement. The donation process was well underway prior to his need for a seawall.
- McFarland has developed a plan to landscape his seawall. That proposal will be submitted to the beach task force, planning commission and city council.
- He cannot understand why the city has waited until now to question his seawall when it has been up for months.
- Griggs never treated him any differently than anyone else, and there were no improprieties by Griggs.

the plan supported by the Coastal Commission.

"In the selection process the Coastal Commission staff as well as Bob Griggs felt that the wall that was selected is the best. It is the same wall that Pebble Beach used for its golf courses.

"That's where the whole idea came from. The selection of the wall was from their suggestions," he said. "I would have loved to have used the riprap. It would have cost thousands less to do what the city did."

McFarland added that he even donated his excess dirt to the city for use in covering its riprap. That dirt was valued at $30,000.

McFarland denied that his donation of private property to the city was an attempt to get the seawall approved with no questions asked.

McFarland has donated to the city his property that stretches from his home to the high

'I again told them that I would take full responsibility. This was in April. Now all of a sudden there's a question about the liability when they didn't have any liability in the first place.'

McFarland said he did not know at the time that not all of the wall is on sand stone. The city is concerned that the lack of a solid foundation could cause the wall to fall and possibly injure a beachgoer.

GRIGGS ALSO added:

- The seawall did not have to be reviewed by the city because codes at that time did not require design review of walls in the R-1 district.
- All of the documents Schmitz sought were in the coastal permit file. Griggs said he was never asked for the allegedly missing documents.
- The seawall was reviewed by the full Coastal Commission and legal notices were advertised that stated the seawall was to be considered along with the city beach project.
- The seawall did not lead to his retirement as planning director effective Jan. 15, 1985. He said it was "differences of opinion on how the city should be managed" that caused him to retire.
- He never played favorites with McFarland. "I have always in my 17 years worked for the best interests of the city," he said. "I work with everybody. Nobody's treated any differently."

In the interview, McFarland outlined the history of the wall and his reaction to the controversy.

"After the severe storms of 1982-83, my property and the stone house (named 'Heather Glenn') were in serious jeopardy if there would be another severe storm," McFarland recalled.

"I set out as quickly as possible to look at all possible alternatives for protection."

McFarland claims that the cement-filled sandbags with iron bars uniting the bags is

'THIS TYPE of wall is used to a great extent along the Atlantic seaboard because there is no bedrock and it has proved very successful," McFarland said.

"I would have loved to use the riprap. It would have cost me less, but I didn't for two reasons: the existing wall is safer and it also uses considerably less beach area so there is more beach for public use," he said.

McFarland said he did not know at the time that not all of the wall is on sand stone. The city is concerned that the lack of a solid foundation could cause the wall to fall and possibly injure a beachgoer.

The fact that some of the wall is not on sandstone was discovered by an engineer working for him on a report to the state, McFarland said.

The city also has raised concerns that the wall was approved in conjunction with the beach rehabilitation project.

But Griggs pointed out that the seawall permit was submitted along with the city applications because that's the way Coastal Commission staff wanted it.

"I went to Santa Cruz and talked to the Coastal Commission staff. They felt this permit should be piggybacked. It's as simple as that," Griggs said.

McFarland added that he has tried a variety of methods to disguise the wall from public view, including plantings and coloring the sandbags a beach sand color.

He now plans to submit a new landscape plan for review by all city agencies.

That plan envisions five-ton boulders in front of the seawall. The boulders would be covered and landscaped, he said.

tide line. He also donated the development rights to a $700,000 lot of record adjacent to his home to the city.

But these donations were offered before the storms of 1982-83. The donations were stalled in then-City Administrator Doug Peterson's office and were not deeded to the city until after Schmitz arrived in February of 1983, McFarland said.

"The donation of the development rights (to the lot) and beach land had nothing to do with permission to build the wall," McFarland said. "I tried to donate it more than a year ago. The former city administrator just never got around to doing it."

McFarland added that he is more than willing to sign a hold harmless agreement with the city.

"I told the city, the Coastal Commission and Doug Schmitz that I would maintain the wall and be responsible for its structural soundness," he said.

"After the wall was built I was questioned by the city administrator and Greg D'Ambrosio (assistant city administrator) and Don Freeman (city attorney).

"I again told them that I would take full responsibility. This was in April. Now all of a sudden there's a question about the liability when they didn't have any liability in the first place."

McFarland said the city never has asked him for a hold harmless agreement but that he "is totally happy to do it."

without city review, why some documents allegedly were missing from the McFarland file, and whether the city was misled about the location of the seawall.

In an interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, McFarland and Griggs responded to those concerns. McFarland also promised to cooperate with the city to work out any problems it may have with the seawall.

In the interview McFarland said:

- He told Schmitz he would sign a hold-harmless agreement with the city that legally relieves the city of any liability should the wall fall.
- It was the Coastal Commission staff who recommended that the wall be "piggybacked" on the city coastal permit for its beach rehabilitation project.
- The Coastal Commission staff also recommended construction of the wall rather than using riprap as the city did. The cement-

Carmel frustrated by water waste

THE CITY of Carmel — faced with serious water supply problems of its own — is angry at what it sees as a tremendous waste of the resource by the California-American Water Co.

On numerous occasions, city workers have spotted leaks in water mains only to have Cal-Am merely place barricades around the area and permit the leak to flow for several days, according to City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

The perceived lack of quick action to repair the leaks has Carmel frustrated, Schmitz told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is expected to release the latest annual water use figures soon. Carmel officials fear city use is going to come close to the allocation imposed by the district.

Under the allocation formula, Carmel can use only 1,030.8 acre feet annually. (There are 325,851 gallons of water in one acre foot.)

If Carmel uses up to 95 percent of its allocation, then the city voluntarily will impose water conservation measures on the citizenry. If the city uses all of its allocation, then it is likely the water district will impose its own mandatory water conservation measures.

Those mandatory measures could range from a prohibition of car washing with running water to a ban on all new development until Carmel uses less water.

The sluggish action by Cal-Am to fix leaks is unacceptable in light of the local water shortage, Schmitz said.

In a letter to Cal-Am Vice-President and Manager Larry Foy, Schmitz outlined city concerns.

"On at least four occasions I have observed Cal-Am barricades over street pavement identifying locations where a break has occurred," Schmitz wrote.

"For whatever reasons, immediate attention was not given to these breaks and considerable amounts of water, a resource of great concern to the populace of the peninsula due to its limited availability, is permitted to run into the storm system."

Schmitz pointed out that Foy has written water district Chairwoman Nancy McClintock: "Cal-Am believes there is, and has been for some period of time, a potential emergency in this year's supply of water."

SCHMITZ'S reaction to Foy's letter to McClintock is:

"I am alarmed that the water company identifies an emergency concerning the supply of water but does not expeditiously repair breaks where this limited resource is, quite bluntly, being wasted."

Schmitz is concerned that Cal-Am does not have a long-range plan to replace or repair older water mains.

Schmitz also included in the letter a detailed account of 24 water pipe breaks, the location and most dates when the incident occurred.

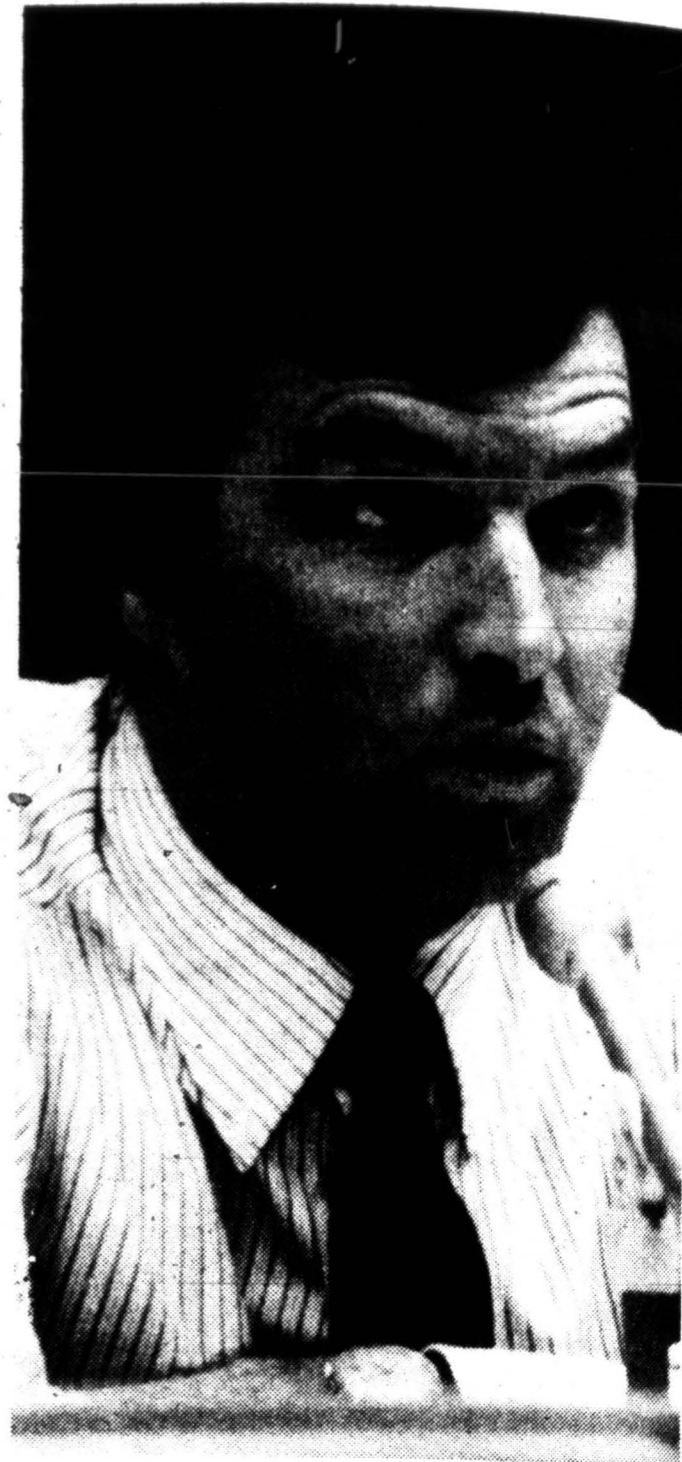

Often Cal-Am would respond to the report and place warning barricades around the leak. But then sometimes it would take crews an entire weekend to come back and repair the break, he claims.

Foy told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook there are an unusual number of water pipe leaks because of the hot, dry year on the Monterey Peninsula.

The ground begins to dry and cake, which puts pressure on the old water pipes. Many of the pipes are so old that any change in the ground will cause the mains to crack and leak, he explained.

"They (the breaks) are not isolated to Carmel. They're all over the peninsula. It's a natural occurrence," Foy said.

Cal-Am responds to each repair call but, because of the number of reports, has to take each on a priority basis, he said.

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Doug Schmitz is concerned that Cal-Am's apparent slowness to repair water pipe leaks is wasting the valuable resource. (Michael Gardner photo.)

"We have crews out every night and Saturday and Sunday. If the leak won't get any worse or won't cause any damage, then we fix the ones that will first," he said.

Foy added that his office has received 150 leak reports in August alone.

"But we're catching up with them," he predicted.

Board to ponder enrollment

ENROLLMENT figures from the opening day of school Wednesday are expected to be discussed by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education when it meets Sept. 7.

Trustees will meet at 7 p.m. in the library of Carmel Middle School, on Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

Supt. William Rand will present trustees with an update on enrollment. Attendance is important to the Carmel district because the state pays about $2,300 for each student, which is called average daily attendance.

However, there is some good news. Although enrollment is down at the middle school and about the same at the high school, projected attendance is up at the two elementary schools.

Enrollment figures released before opening day show the projected attendance at Carmel River School is 390 compared to 358 last year. Anticipated enrollment at Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley is up from 335 to 350.

The middle school, however, has experienced a drop of nearly 75 students. Last year's enrollment was 532, while estimates for this year predict an attendance of 455.

The news is mixed at the high school. The projected attendance of 840 is about the same as last year. But that enrollment is nearly 40 more students than the 803 projected by officials earlier this year.

Trustees also are expected to adopt the proposed $7 million 1984-85 budget. A public hearing on the budget was conducted Sept. 4.

Principals of each school also are expected to present a status report on opening day.

Trustees also will discuss an information item on how to better "market" the schools in terms of providing more information to the public.

And, trustees are scheduled to give final approval to the $25 per student, per semester home-to-school busing fee.

Students can ride the buses for two weeks before the payment is due. For payment information, call or see the school secretary.

Dismissed principal files suit against the Briarcliff Academy

JERRY TRAYNOR, the former Carmel Woods School principal who quit in 1982 to become headmaster at the fledgling private Briarcliff Academy, only to be released in mid-May, has filed a lawsuit against the private school.

Traynor seeks about $150,000 in damages from the Briarcliff Academy Board of Trustees, which allegedly misled him into thinking he would be the headmaster in the 1984-85 school year.

He accuses the board of breach of contract and wrongful dismissal.

Traynor alleges that the late notice of dismissal made it impossible for him to find employment in the education field at a similar and same-paying position. Traynor was paid about $40,000 annually.

Traynor claims that he was assured by trustees that he would remain as headmaster. He also claims that his understanding is that he had a three-year contract.

Traynor's attorney is A. David Parnie of Monterey. Named in the suit are members of the board of trustees: Alan and Rita Shugart of Pebble Beach; Annie Bedell Smith of Menlo Park; Michael Stamp of Pacific Grove; and Marilyn Tulley, who served as Traynor's assistant until she was promoted to replace him.

The Shugarts opened the school in 1981. They purchased from the Carmel Unified School District the 2.8-acre site on Dolores Street near First Avenue. The Shugarts paid about $1 million for the school.

Assistant police chief Bob Fischer to retire after 31 years on job

By FLORENCE MASON

'THE COMMUNITY and I became one." Asst. Police Chief Bob Fischer has been on the Carmel police force for 31 years, and as he talked about his coming retirement that was one of the reasons he gave for his long service.

The community with which he identified himself will honor him with a retirement dinner Nov. 24, and Nov. 30 will be his last day on the job.

Fischer was not one of those police officers who planned a law enforcement career from an early age. He was working at a service station in Carmel when then-chief Clyde Klaumann stopped by and asked him if he wanted a job.

"With three small children, the chance for security and $295 a month convinced me," Fischer said. "Once I got into it I found I enjoyed it very, very much."

What appealed to him? "The diversity of activities, and the chances to advance." Through the years there were opportunities to advance into other police departments, too, but "when it came down to it, I couldn't leave Carmel," Fischer said.

In 1960, Fischer was appointed sergeant. In 1966 he became a lieutenant, and in 1976, captain. His appointment as assistant chief of police came in 1982. For 17 years he was watch commander on night duty — the long hours between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m. That ended when he became captain and assumed responsibility for personnel, training, finances and deployment. He has continued with those administrative responsibilities as assistant chief, an appointment he modestly describes as "recognition by the city council."

The most difficult part of his 31 years' service was that night duty, because it meant being away from his home and family at night and on many weekends. As for the best part of the years of service in Carmel, he said: "I can't say it is seeing Carmel grow! But realizing that Carmel is a unique community, and being able to participate, career-wise, has given me a great deal of pleasure."

When he talks of his coming retirement, Fischer admits to mixed feelings. It is a consolation to him to be leaving when he sees "an advancement of so many businesses and the proliferation of tourists and automobiles."

He believes the present problems Carmel faces will require solutions "that as a police officer I cannot participate in." Asked for an example, he quickly said: "Parking."

But Assistant Chief Fischer as citizen Fischer will not leave it to others to solve. "I hope to enter into some type of contact as a private citizen to influence decisions," he said. Later, he spoke of the possibility of serving on a city board or commission. "I might even run for the city council," he said.

His tone became sharper when he talked about the need for action on some of Carmel's problems. "My immediate belief is that such problems as parking should be attended to right now. There have been many and costly studies over the years, but nothing has been done. Some ideas have been poor, some excellent; none have been accepted," Fischer said.

He refused to comment on the current difficulties between the city and the business district. Still speaking as a member of the police department he said: "No comment. That's a political issue."

AS AN example of the changes over the years, and the added difficulties for his department, Fischer said that in 1953 he could walk the business beat in about one hour and 15 minutes, checking doors and taking time to talk to people. "Today, it can't be done in six hours!" he observed.

Fischer spoke of the most serious situation he'd been involved in over the years. "I had to confront a berserk young man at 2 a.m. He had been shooting out faces he was seeing on the walls in his house," he recounted. "I vividly recall knowing that gunfire was involved and then having a revolver stuck right in my stomach, with the firing hammer pulled. That got my attention right away!"

"I knew the young man. I grabbed the cylinder of the revolver and locked my thumb under the firing hammer, and then I started talking to him. I said, 'Bill, it's me.' Finally, I was able to take the gun away from him. Eventually, he was sent for a medical evaluation."

There were amusing incidents, too. "When I was a rookie, I chased a group of young men in a Model A down Junipero. They had been breaking windows in the business area.

Bob Fischer to retire after 31 years on force

Two of them went into the brush at Junipero and 10th. The driver stayed in the car. I handcuffed him to the steering wheel of my patrol car and went after the others. When I came back to my car, the steering wheel, my handcuffs and the suspect were gone!"

The suspect was picked up later by sheriff's deputies — hitchhiking and still attached to handcuffs and the steering wheel of the police car. To add insult to injury for rookie Fischer, he had left all the patrol car's lights on and the battery was dead. "Very embarrassing," Fischer concluded.

The Carmel Police Department has changed dramatically during the 31 years of his service, Fischer said. At the time of that episode, there were seven men in the department. Now there are 30, including one female sworn officer. There are a number of different divisions now, too — parking, communications, patrol, detective and administration.

More is demanded of a new officer now, Fischer said, and none of them walks in off the street as he once did. They now have at least four months of police academy training and six weeks in Carmel with one senior officer. That is followed by four and one-half months of specific on-the-job training on one shift under the training officer and training sergeant.

"It's almost a year before a new officer is released to the field," Fischer said. He compared it to 1953, when no training was required. "My first watch was from midnight to 8 a.m. I was told where to walk. That was it."

Fischer would like to see more officers out of their cars and on foot today. He has mixed feelings about the new Carmel horseback patrol, mainly because at present it focuses on one area — the beach and Scenic Road. "It could be used more, and this may come about after a study of how it's working out has been completed," he said.

So how does he feel about leaving? "Thirty-one years is long enough! And it's time for younger people to take over." In all those years he served under only three chiefs:

Clyde Klaumann, William Ellis and present Chief John McGilvray.

"I feel especially close to Clyde (Klaumann) because he gave me my start," Fischer said. "But I have been very fortunate. The department has only had three chiefs since 1916 and every one of them has been unique and has possessed good characteristics of leadership."

FISCHER said that in the past three years "there has been every indication of progress on the right path. We have direction and a series of goals that will be achieved. Chief McGilvray has turned us from looking inward to looking outward and to the future."

Assistant Chief Fischer turned aside a question about relationships with the city administration. But he spoke positively about his experience as a voting member of the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board.

"That's been a distinct pleasure," he said. "It would be nice to have other administrative and supervisory people sit in on it. It's an opportunity to participate in local government and learn what is going on. And I've always been able to find something humorous at every meeting."

On the whole, he said, the board is "a good watchdog. With a seven-member panel, outrageous decisions are avoided. It's very helpful to incoming business people."

There has been a considerable increase in the number of crimes in Carmel — both commercial and residential — over the years of his service, Fischer said. But it is not in direct proportion to the number of residents, which has stayed nearly the same.

The increase does parallel an increase in the number of people present in Carmel, he believes — as many as 40,000 on any one day. "Carmel has always been low in the number of violent crimes," Fischer said, noting that there have only been three homicides in Carmel since 1914.

"Crime investigation was always one of my primary interests," he said. "I've investigated rape, armed robberies, the last homicide and many felonies. But they are still few and far between."

Investigation is one thing, but successful conviction is another, he believes. "In too many instances, justice is nothing but a revolving door," he said.

There is more white-collar crime now, Fischer said. "And far more drug abuse. It exists in Carmel — it definitely exists!"

Thoughtfully, Fischer offered this message to his fellow citizens of Carmel:

"Carmel will never go back to what it was — to deer eating flowers at Ocean and San Carlos, to our having to corral horses from the stables on Junipero. We'll never be able to park and walk in the business district without confusion. That has to be accepted. "In spite of this, Carmel is still the most unique, most private, most desirable city in the country as far as I'm concerned," he smiled.

Fischer would like to see Carmel police officers "blend in with the community, participate in community affairs and know the true Carmel citizens, not just the tourists." One way to do this, he believes, is "just get out of the car! Stop and talk to people."

He thinks they have time for that. Then, laughing, he said: "The question is, will they block traffic while they do that — cause a traffic jam? Well, that relationship with the citizens has to be developed. The officers have to realize each individual contact with one of our citizens is a jewel and they walk away each time with something valuable."

THAT'S HOW Bob Fischer sees the people with and for whom he works. How do

'Carmel will never go back to what it was — to deer eating flowers at Ocean and San Carlos, to our having to corral horses from the stables on Junipero. We'll never be able to park and walk in the business district without confusion. That has to be accepted.'

they see him? Sandy Swain, chairwoman of the Carmel Planning Commission and a fellow member of the business license board said: "I think Bob Fischer is one of the fairest individuals I have ever had the opportunity to know. He is a happy gentleman and will be sorely missed."

With particular reference to his service on the business license board, she said: "He has the ability to look at things from a non-prejudiced standpoint. He zeroes in on the right thing to do. Unfortunately, his kind seems to be disappearing."

And one of his fellow officers, Sgt. Jon Bowman, spoke particularly of Fischer's ability to understand others. "I worked with him five years," Bowman said. "I think he is great. He even helped me through some personal problems when I was first here. With all his heavy work load, he is always very understanding and a fine supervisor."

In a sense, the loss to the Carmel Police Department will be a gain to a Carmel business. Fischer plans to devote some of his new-found spare time to assist his wife, Marion, in her Carmel Weddings business. His role? "Gofer!"

But the shoe is on the other foot, as far as Marion Fischer is concerned. "I look forward to his being like the head of the business and I'll be his worker; I'll do the weddings." There is no question about her attitude toward her husband's retirement: "I'm thrilled he is retiring. And I'd like to see him run for city council."

There will be time also for travel to visit the Fischers' three daughters in interesting places: Dianne in Flagstaff, Ariz.; Kathleen and Gail in Ogden, Utah. There are seven grandchildren, too. Fischer lists them as "granddaughters Tammy and Rachael, and grandsons one through five."

Fischer graduated from Monterey Peninsula College and the FBI National Academy in Quantico, Va. He is a past president of the Monterey County Peace Officers' Association and served as an instructor at MPC and various institutes.

Today he looks back on his long career with the Carmel Police Department, and also looks forward to a different role as a private citizen in the same city. He described meeting an old man from New Jersey some years ago. The man had been in the police force in New Jersey for 25 years and was vacationing in Carmel.

"He hated his work and couldn't wait to retire," Fischer recalled. "He had always wanted to live in Carmel. I realized how lucky I was, walking my beat in the town that many chose of all others to retire to." His walks will continue, but in the future they will be at his favorite time of day in Carmel — early morning — as a private but still very active citizen.

Brunn gears up for supervisor race

By MICHAEL GARDNER

HOWARD BRUNN apparently doesn't give up easily.

Brunn, a former Carmel City councilman, finished as runner-up to Karin Strasser Kauffman in the initial June 5 race for the right to replace Fifth District Supervisor William Peters, who chose not to seek re-election.

However Brunn will get a second chance in a runoff election Nov. 6 when he squares off against Strasser Kauffman, who failed to win the required support of more than 50 percent of the voters.

Stasser Kauffman was tops in the five-person field of candidates, which included Ed Lee of Carmel, Dortha Roesler of Salinas and Neill Gardner of Monterey. Strasser Kauffman finished far in front with 6,069 votes, or 39 percent. Brunn trailed by about 10 percentage points.

But his disappointing loss has not deterred Brunn, who insists he can win in November.

Although he doesn't exactly exude confidence, Brunn has sold his Carmel Mercantile Co. in The Crossroads to devote full-time to the upcoming campaign.

In an Aug. 29 interview with the Carmel Pine Cone-Carmel Valley Outlook to announce the sale of the business and opening of a new campaign headquarters, Brunn explained why he said "No" to what he thinks of his chances in November and how he stands on a variety of different topics.

"I had given it (the sale) some thought before I ran for supervisor, but the necessity of seven-day weeks showed me that I could not give this campaign my best effort unless I could devote full-time to it," Brunn said.

"I want to be a full-time campaigner and a full-time supervisor," he added.

"I had found during the primaries that it went against my nature to try to run the campaign and still keep in touch with my business. It just didn't work."

Brunn has sold his Carmel Mercantile Co., which he started three years ago as one of the first businesses in The Crossroads, to David and Cheryl Bindel.

Bindel is the owner of the Bath House and co-owner of The Tinnery, both Pacific Grove restaurants. Mrs. Bindel worked for Brunn at Carmel Mercantile Co.

Brunn stops short of predicting victory in November.

Although he trailed Strasser Kauffman in the primary, Brunn did say he is "very positive" he can overcome that 10-percent lead she had in the June results.

'No, I'm not over-confident. I feel very positive about the support coming my way from the leadership in the Ed Lee committee," Brunn said.

His own campaign has undergone some changes since June, Brunn said.

"We have completely reorganized our campaign and we are setting up area captains," he said. "The district is so large that it's like running five campaigns."

Brunn said these "captains" will be placed in different areas of the Fifth District, which includes Big Sur, Carmel, Carmel Valley, portions of Pebble Beach, and out Highway 68 to Toro Park south of Salinas.

Brunn plans to launch a new advertising blitz with bumper stickers and posters. A catchy slogan also is in the works.

Brunn also discussed how he stands on a variety of key issues before the county.

He remains supportive of the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway route, the $30-million project that will connect Carpenter and Rio Roads via a new freeway east of Highway 1.

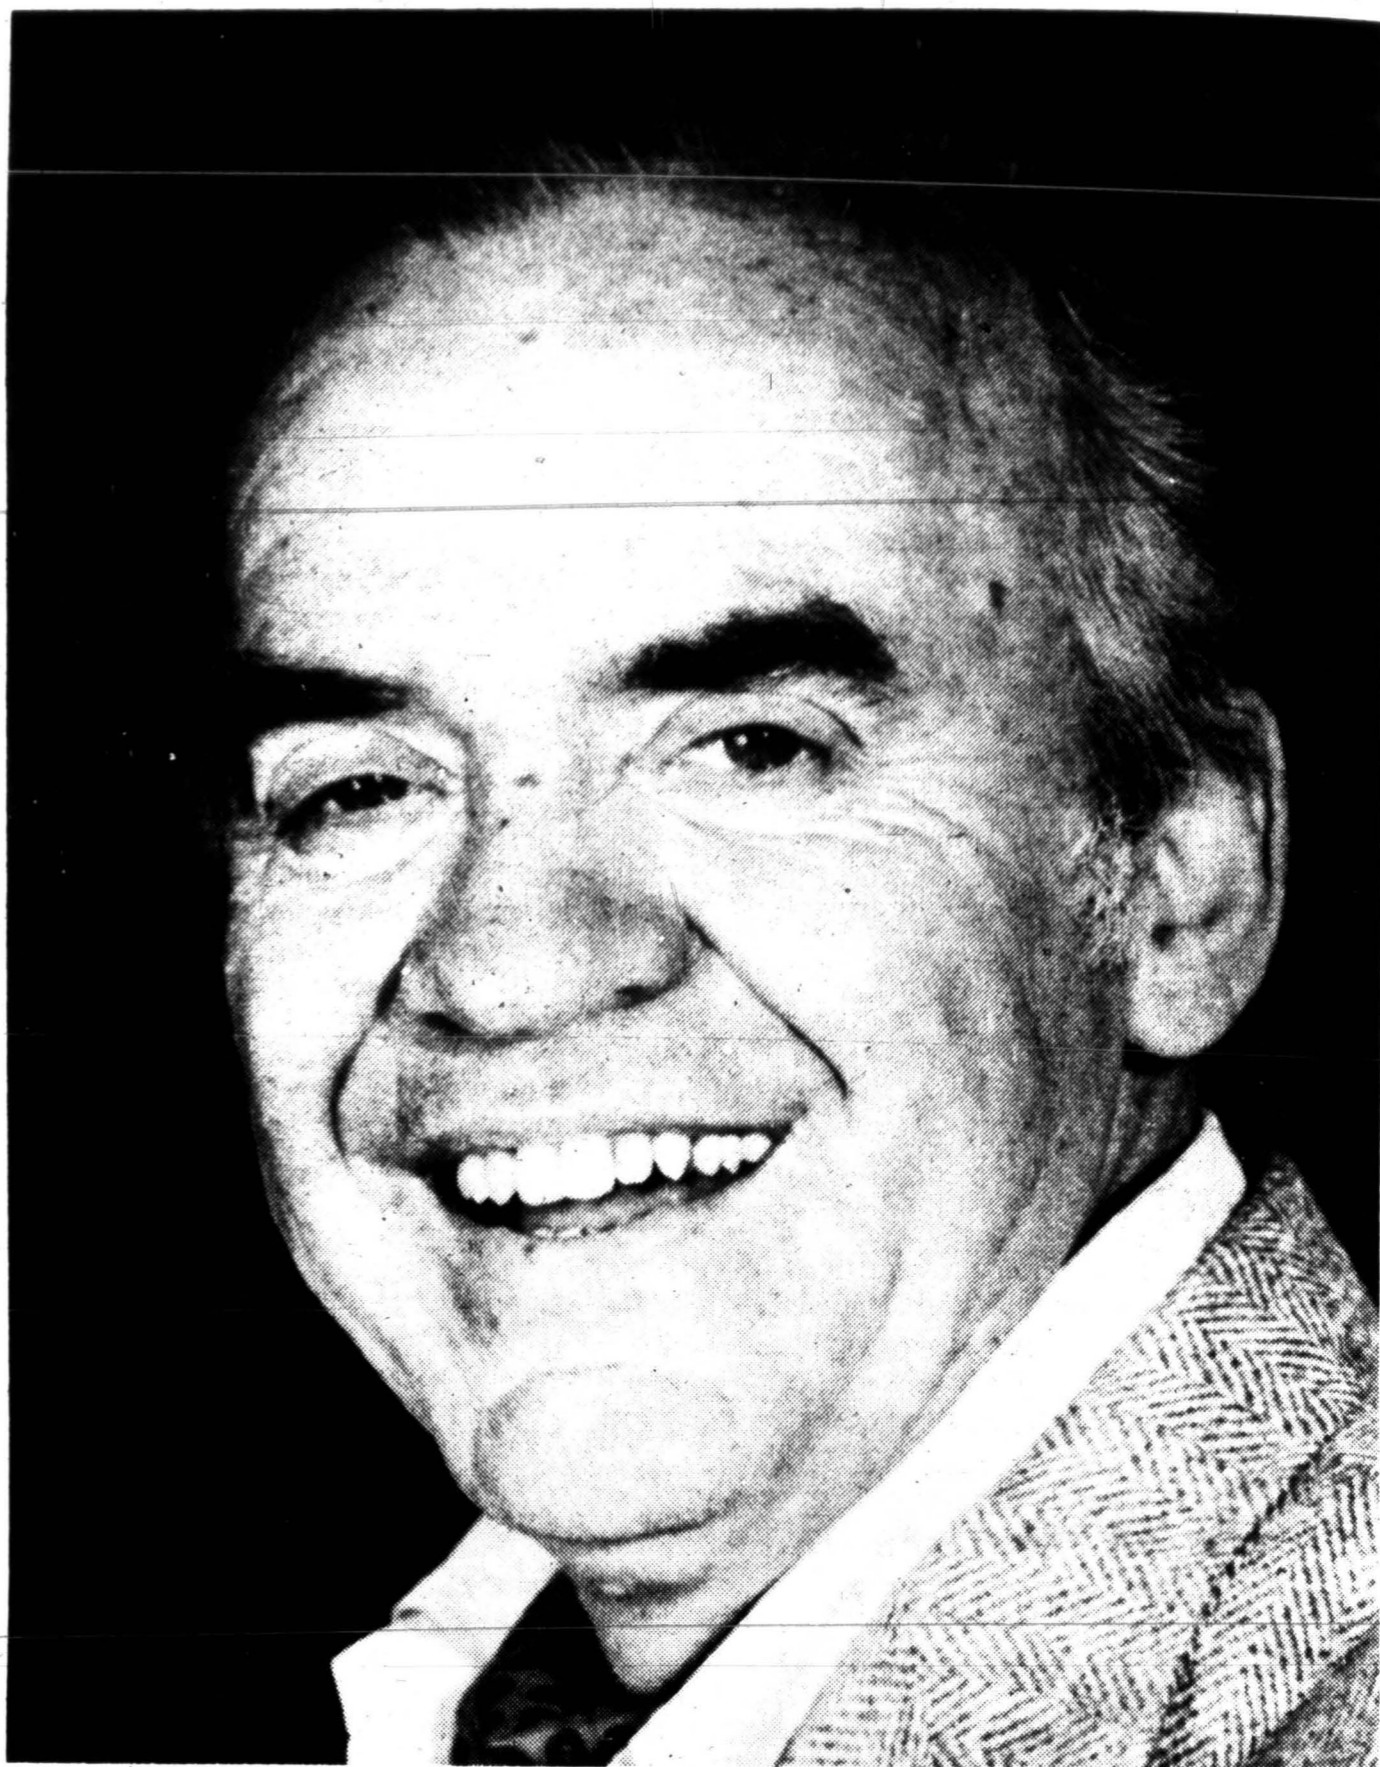

"I think we (Mrs. Strasser Kauffman and himself) favor it. I've never wavered from my position."

Brunn opposes a complete expansion of Carmel Valley Road, although he does support a four-lane road from Highway 1 to Robinson Canyon Road.

"I support it up until the Farm Center. We probably won't have to do it for another 10 years, but it has to be done."

He also thinks the stretch between Laureles Grade and Carmel Valley Village is a "death trap."

"Eventually we're going to have to widen it and straighten it," he said in reference to that approximately one-mile, tree-lined stretch of Carmel Valley Road.

HOWARD BRUNN has sold his Carmel Mercantile Company business to devote full time to his race against Karin Strasser Kauffman for the Fifth District seat on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

A new dam on the upper Carmel River should be constructed as soon as possible, Brunn believes.

"I favor a dam in Carmel Valley now. I would push to build the dam and have less emphasis on alternatives and studies."

The slowness with which the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has acted on the dam construction prompted a futile attempt to place a measure to disband the district on the November ballot.

Brunn did not support that failed attempt by Pacific Grove public relations man Mark Grover.

"I think that action was a bit premature," Brunn said.

Brunn does support the attempts by the Odello Family to develop a 162-unit residential subdivision on their property east of Highway 1 about one-half mile south of Rio Road.

CURRENTLY, the proposal is stalled by a city of Carmel lawsuit that seeks to halt the development.

"I'm quite comfortable with the 162 units proposed by the Odello Family," Brunn said. "The Odellos have paid their dues and should be allowed to get on with it."

Brunn also supports another project about two miles east of the Odello property. That project envisions two hotels, a conference center, restaurant and 42 residential homes on the Point Lobos Ranch property just across Highway 1 from the state reserve.

Although he supports the original concept, Brunn said he cannot say whether he favors a proposal by Peters to amend the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program to allow developers to build one motel, restaurant and convention center on Huckleberry Hill.

Brunn supports the city of Carmel in its attempts to decrease the density for the proposed 65-unit residential complex at Mission Ranch, just south of the Carmel city limits near Carmel Mission.

Brunn, like the city council, also argues that the 4.68 acres set aside as protected wetlands is a false figure and should be increased. The more wetlands protected means the less density developers can obtain.

On the proposed 3,800-unit Rancho San Carlos project south of Carmel Valley Road in the hills between Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Village, Brunn commented: "I really want to see the environmental impact report first."

"The appropriate density for Rancho San Carlos is going to be based a lot on what the EIR says."

Brunn will mark the opening of his new campaign headquarters with a reception from 4 to 6 p.m. Sept. 7. The office is in the Catlin Building on Rancho Lane at the mouth of the Valley.

Subdivision panel seeks minimum Valley impact

MEMBERS of the newly-appointed Carmel Valley Subdivision Evaluation Committee say their goal is to ensure that the best projects are built with the least amount of environmental damage to the area.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors Aug. 28 appointed five committee members and an alternate on the recommendation of Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley.

However, appointee Earl Moser told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that he does not have the time to serve and has asked Peters to replace him.

Ernest ("Bud") Zanetta was appointed as Moser's replacement Tuesday.

The members of the committee are: Richard Dalsemer, Donna Dougherty, Sam Smith and Robin Beare. There also is alternate Donald Higgins.

The committee will review proposed developments in the Valley and make recommendations to the planning commission.

The projects will be rated on their impact on the Valley environment, including traffic, sewage capacity and water supply.

The master plan allocation system allows for only 59 new units to be developed annually. The existing approximately 1,000 lots of record are not subject to the allocation system.

Committee members who talked with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook indicated they see the committee as a way to help preserve the Valley and ensure that only quality developments are built.

"Everyone in the Valley is concerned about the quality of life with the water, sewer and traffic problems," said Robin Beare, an attorney and 11-year resident of the Valley.

"We can make a contribution to make sure the development is the best it can be," she continued.

Ms. Beare is a member of the Carmel Valley Trails Association. She lives near Garland Park.

Ms. Dougherty is a realtor with offices in Monterey and Carmel. She lives in Carmel Valley near the river.

"I volunteered because I felt it was time I gave something back to the community," she said.

Mrs. Dougherty especially is interested in preserving Carmel River.

"I LOVE the river and I love living there," said Ms. Dougherty, who has owned a home in the Valley for five years.

Dalsemer, who is self-employed, is a past president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA) and still sits as a director.

"I'm concerned about the quality of growth in Carmel Valley and I want to contribute to the extent possible. I want to see growth at the highest quality," Dalsemer said.

Dalsemer, a six-year resident of the Valley, also served on the now-disbanded Monterey County General Plan Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC). He lives near the village.

Higgins is a past president of the Carmel Views Homeowners Association and has served on planning advisory committees in several different communities.

A six-year resident of the Valley, he now is retired.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Boronda residents push for interim measures

By ROBERT MISKIMON

FRUSTRATION is mounting among Boronda area residents of the Carmel River who want some kind of interim erosion protection this winter.

Members of the Committee for Common Sense attended an Aug. 27 meeting of the Carmel River Advisory Committee to ask for some immediate river protection measures, since a proposed Carmel River Management Program can't be implemented until next spring.

But they found to their consternation that a quorum of advisory committee members were not seated, and the meeting was cancelled. Furthermore, there is little likelihood that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors will consider the request at its Sept. 10 meeting, said Margaret Lidstrom, unofficial spokesperson for the Common Sense group.

The primary item on the agenda for the 7:30 p.m. Sept. 10 meeting at the Seaside City Hall is a public hearing and second reading of an ordinance to increase new water hookup fees as much as tenfold to generate advance funds for construction of a new dam on the Carmel River.

"We've been told that our request has to be approved by the river advisory committee first, so we'll try to get another meeting of the committee scheduled with a quorum," Mrs. Lidstrom said. "We want a time schedule to plant willows. Hopefully, we can get them to set a special meeting."

But Boronda area residents, especially members of the Committee for Common Sense, are concerned that time is getting short for any kind of river protection measures before this year's rainy season begins. They would like the water management district to use some of the $90,000 accumulated toward the Boronda project to plant willow trees for erosion control and to remove snags and sediment from the river channel.

Committee members also want the water district to issue river residents a guidebook on river bank protection and to provide a detailed explanation and cost breakdown for the proposed Boronda project.

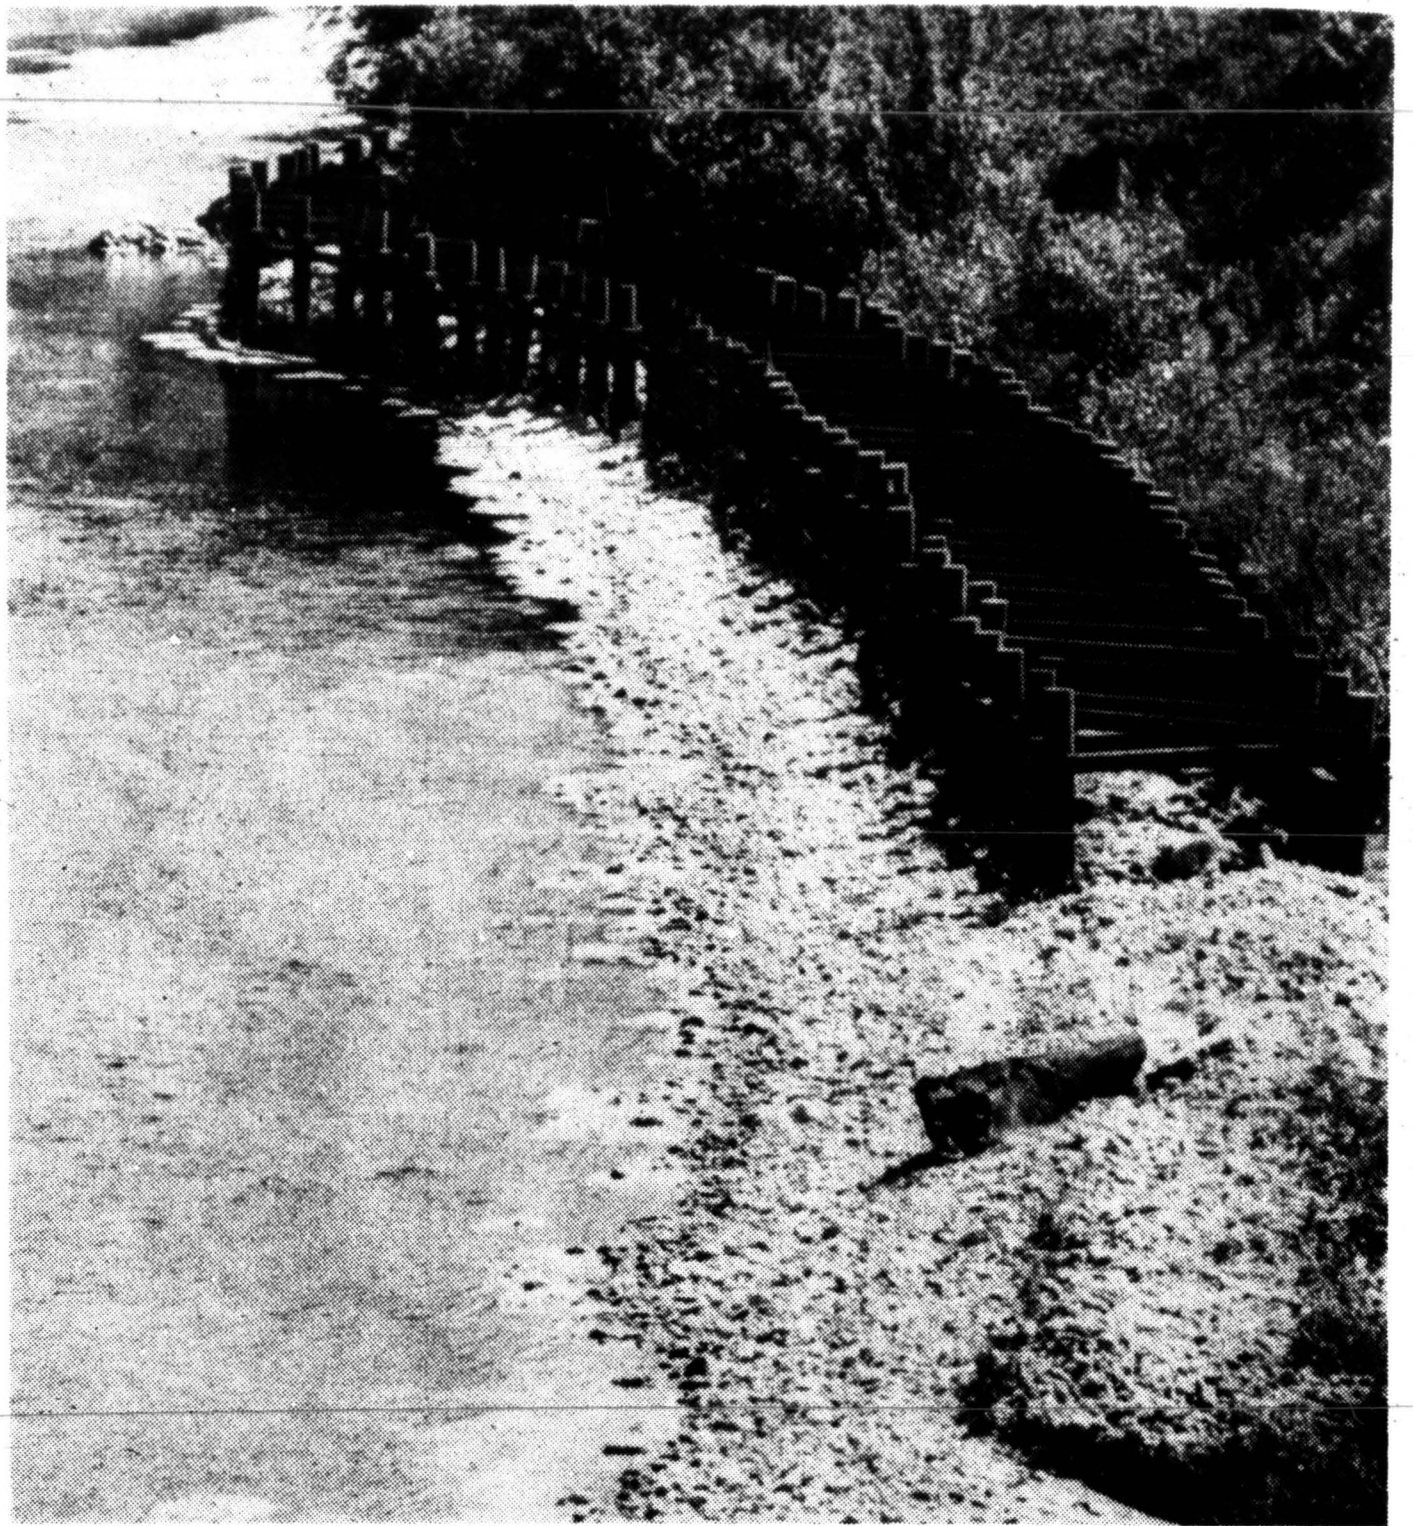

Two items scheduled for discussion at the Aug. 27 session of the Carmel River Advisory Committee involved staff recommendations that action be taken to remove snags from the river channel and that willows be planted along the river as interim measures.

Mrs. Lidstrom said she and members of her group are frustrated because an Aug. 24 letter to "property owners and residents of Boronda reach" from water district directors Dick Heuer and Patricia Bernardi indicated that approval from the Carmel River Advisory Committee would be required before any interim protection measures could be undertaken.

IN THEIR LETTER, directors Heuer and Bernardi took the Committee for Common Sense to task for having created "a great deal of confusion" regarding the proposed Boronda reach program.

Specifically, Heuer and Bernardi challenged an accusation in an Aug. 20 Committee for Common Sense letter that statements by Congressman Leon Panetta "have shattered the last thread of credibility" of the water management district.

The committee letter indicated Panetta had said that federal assistance would not be available for river management efforts along only a portion of the river — such as the Boronda reach — but would only become available for a coordinated program along the entire river.

EROSION CONTROL measures along the Carmel River would be installed as part of the proposed Boronda reach project, which has been delayed at least until next spring. A series of revetments would be installed in the channel and willows planted along the banks.

Many property owners, including Carmel Valley Ranch (above), already have installed their own erosion devices, such as these pilings near the golf course. (Alan McEwen photo.)

"Actually, the statements attributed to Panetta are exactly what we and all other responsible officials have been saying for years — that the river must be analyzed and treated as a whole, and that funding is not going to be available for piecemeal projects," the Heuer/Bernardi letter said.

"This doesn't mean the entire length of the river must be repaired in one season. It does mean that every step-by-step project must be part of a coordinated plan for the entire river. If we do receive Soil Conservation Service (SCS) funding, as we hope and expect, it will only be because we do have a plan for the entire river."

"And the SCS funding would be for the entire river, not just the Boronda reach. The Boronda project would be funded the first year, with additional funds to become available in succeeding years for work on other parts of the river."

The Heuer/Bernardi letter also challenges an assertion in the Committee for Common Sense letter that funds raised by an assessment of 35 cents per linear foot of riverfront property are "being used to help pay salaries, office expenses and postage, rather than to help property owners. It also says these funds should, instead, be used for snag removal, to facilitate willow planting, and other interim actions to benefit property owners this fall."

Both of those assumptions are incorrect, according to Heuer and Bernardi.

"The monies from the riverfront property benefit assessment are not used for administrative expenses, nor do they need to be used for most of the interim actions planned this fall."

"None of the $45,000 collected during the first year of the program has been spent, as it was all allocated to the Boronda project, which has now been delayed. It is possible that a portion of these funds could be allocated for interim projects this fall either in the Boronda area or elsewhere."

ROBERT ZOBEL, chairman of the Carmel River Advisory Committee, told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that he doesn't understand the sense of urgency of Committee for Common Sense members for immediate river protection measures.

"They can't plant willows now anyway," Zobel said. "The proper time to plant them is in the spring. If you plant them in the winter time, then the river comes up and washes the roots out."

A description of the proposed Boronda reach project and its potential effects is included in the draft environmental impact report prepared for the water management district by ESA Planning and Environmental Services of San Francisco.

The EIR says the 2.25-mile Boronda project would include "a combination of structural and vegetative protection measures to control bank and bed erosion." The structural works would include stone-filled wire mesh gabion revetments to be complemented by intensive willow planting.

"A herringbone pattern of structural and vegetative revetments would be constructed in the river channel," according to the EIR. "The herringbone arrangement is intended to induce the water in the river to follow a path toward the center of the river channel and subsequently to create a central channel at that location."

"Generally, areas of sharp meander would contain gabion walls placed on 50-foot centers along the outside of the meander curves.... Willow revetments would be placed on 25- to 50-foot centers between gabion walls, and willow stems would also be planted along the gabion walls themselves. Additional vegetation would be established along the terrace banks."

The EIR describes numerous potential benefits of the program, including improved channel stability, reduced erosion, better conditions for steelhead migration and improved esthetics.

However, there is a caveat.

"The long-term success of the preferred solution entails some degree of uncertainty," according to the EIR. "Nor is it possible to make a clear assessment of the likelihood of success or failure."

"To some extent, the design represents a gamble" that flooding could wash out the river works or planted willows. "The project could fail in a number of ways, minor or major."

"Total failure would likely mean a return to the current conditions...partial failures or the potential for them can be mitigated in various ways."

THE VALLEY SAGE

BY VICTORIA ANDREWS

The 'dish' and scare tactics

'DUMP the dish!' is again the rallying war cry of Cachagua residents who vehemently protest the proposal of Communications Satellite Corp. to add 25,000 sq. ft. to its present facility in the hills of Cachagua.

According to Bill Durney, local vintner and longtime Cachagua resident, a just-released environmental impact report ordered by the county last fall does little to alleviate the concerns of the protest group that calls itself the Concerned Citizens of Cachagua.

Durney told the Sage that, after reviewing the report, he finds the COMSAT plan "close to insanity...even worse than our original fears. The radioactivity will affect all the Valley. COMSAT doesn't benefit anyone anywhere in the area."

He added that our elected government officials, from the county to national level, have opposed the plan, and noted that a presidential commission has been established to re-examine acceptable standards of radiation emission into the atmosphere.

A.J. Stotler, manager of the COMSAT station, disagrees entirely with Durney's assessment of the EIR. "We are favorably impressed with the report," he said. "It reinforces the position we've held all along."

That position is that the Jamesburg Earth Station provides a vital link in an international communications network without endangering either the local environment or regional security.

Stotler spoke with the Sage several times to reinforce his position that the proposed COMSAT expansion is not in keeping with the accusations leveled by many local militants.

While there may be several issues that require clarification before COMSAT and the Concerned Citizens see eye-to-eye on anything, some of the points of disagreement can be laid to rest right now.

Charity Crane of the citizens' group expressed concern last spring that PCB contamination was present at the COMSAT dump site. She addressed that concern to Walter Wong, county chief of environmental health, who conducted an investigation and responded via letter with the following statement: "COMSAT has complied with all our recommendations, and laboratory results from Soil Control Laboratory of Watsonville showed no PCB present."

Another worry expressed to the Sage by Durney was the charge that COMSAT had misrepresented itself as being only a receiving station. In fact, Durney said, it is both a receiving and transmitting station, and the transmission process emits far more radiation than reception alone.

Stotler said that, of course, the facility both receives and transmits and appeared somewhat mystified that anyone would have thought otherwise.

ANOTHER BONE of contention with the Cachagua citizens concerns traffic increases along Carmel Valley Road if the expansion is approved and built.

Anyone who travels the road regularly may shudder at the prospect of huge construction vehicles adding to the already difficult traffic delays. However, I was interested to discover that the route proposed by COMSAT and discussed in the EIR traverses Carmel Valley Road only as it winds along from Greenfield — not from the mouth of the Valley, as previously charged.

The Sage spoke with the two Fifth District supervisorial candidates, Howard Brunn and Karin Strasser Kauffman about their position on the COMSAT issue.

Brunn stated: "I stand against the expansion of COMSAT. It represents an inappropriate industrial use of the Cachagua Valley area. I've studied it carefully and viewed it from a neighboring ranch."

Strasser Kauffman said that she has not yet determined what her final decision will be. "The EIR is just out," she said. "And it bears careful study before making a judgment."

She cautioned against a fearful reactionary response on the part of the public and added that it is the responsibility of public officials to investigate the issues calmly and avoid making the public hysterical.

It seems that the public is already hysterical on this one — or merely furious — or possibly just irate. In any event, people are unhappy for myriad reasons with the prospect of more dishes from COMSAT's cuisine.

Personal preference suggests that the dishes, known more correctly as antennae, will be a distinct eyesore among the oaks and pines and meadows of Cachagua. However, common sense suggests that a close and thoughtful examination of the quite technical EIR should predate any scary talk about PCBs, radiation or Russian invasions.

Fortunately, there is still a bit of light news to report. The CVPOA picnic is scheduled for Sept. 16 at the Carmel Valley Community Center in the Village. More next week, as the CVPOA has not yet made available the intricate details of this planned gathering. The next CVPOA meeting will be at 7:30 p.m., Sept. 12, at St. Dunstan's Church. If you have questions of the group, call 624-1345.

Michelle and Jay Rush will serve refreshments and offer tours through their new headquarters, of which they are justifiably proud.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

SUK CHOO KIM, eldest son of the late Abbot Han San Lee, walked toward the garden from the Buddhist temple in Carmel Valley where round-the-clock vigils in Abbot Lee's memory drew followers from around the world. (Victoria Andrews photos.)

Death of Han San Lee saddens Buddhist world

By VICTORIA ANDREWS

THE DEATH Aug. 25 of Han San Lee, founder and abbot of the Korean Buddhist Temple in Carmel Valley, has saddened the international community that revered him for his spiritual gifts and honored him for his philanthropic contributions.

Lee Harbick, lifelong peninsula resident and close friend of the Lee family, spoke with this writer about Abbot Lee, who she said "was one of the most fabulous men I've ever met."

She described her friend and mentor as a joyous spiritual leader who devoted himself to daily meditation and to the establishment of Buddhism as a religious movement in this country.

Abbot Lee acquired enormous material wealth in his earlier years in Seoul, Korea, as a developer and engineer. During his life there he provided full academic scholarship for innumerable students at the University of Seoul who otherwise could not have afforded to attend college.

Abbot Lee is reputed to have spent more than $100 million in direct academic aid and in the establishment of several student movements — including the Sambo Association — which still exists to further the teachings of Buddha.

When he came to the United States 14 years ago, Lee and his family settled on Pebble Beach as the community which offered spiritual peace and the quiet natural setting he sought. However, Ms. Harbick said, because he was Korean he had difficulty purchasing a house there, until the real estate agent learned that he intended to pay the full amount in cash.

Abbot Lee and his family — his wife and seven children — moved two years later to Carmel Valley, where he undertook the construction of the Korean Buddhist Temple.

'Don't say it; do it,' was the credo of the abbot who discouraged the presence at his temple of organized religious leaders if they placed great emphasis on lecturing. 'If people want it, they'll find it for themselves,' was his outlook.

Lee provided all of the funds and much of the labor to erect the temple, which stands on a secluded plot of seven and one-half acres off Robinson Canyon Road.

ABBOT LEE'S eldest son, Suk Choo Kim, described his father last Thursday during a respite from a meditation vigil for Abbot Lee, who lay in state at the temple until his funeral Saturday.

THE KOREAN Buddhist Temple in Carmel Valley was the final life work of Abbot Han

San Lee, who provided the funds for the temple as well as his own labor.

Spiritual leader mourned

Kim said Abbot Lee provided "space to accommodate any belief" at the temple. While he would give guidance if asked, he never recruited a congregation and believed that the way to enlightenment was through personal meditation and self-awareness.

"Don't say it; do it," was the credo of the abbot who discouraged the presence at his temple of organized religious leaders if they placed great emphasis on lecturing. "If people want it; they'll find it for themselves," was his outlook.

Kim noted that his father was 67 at the time of his death, not 74 as has been reported elsewhere in the media. A foul-up on his passport when he became a United States citizen accounts for the error which, Kim said, would have required more paperwork to correct than seemed worthwhile.

Kim recalled that his family "lived like the Rockefellers" in Seoul — a reference to the abundant wealth of both families. But he said his father was ever-conscious that he had made his fortune through the efforts of others, and wanted to return it to those who had helped him acquire it.

Suk Choo Kim, 34, offered his father's credo for successful living, a belief by which Abbot Lee felt that anyone would incidentally achieve material wealth merely as a matter of course.

By the abbot's teachings, success requires three components: do what you really love; be utterly honest; and apply yourself with total dedication.

Kim, who as the eldest son occupies a traditional role of power within the Oriental family structure, said that he had strayed from the first precept. Photography is his first love, though he has been a successful manufacturer in Arcata.

Time with his family in Carmel Valley since his father's death has reordered his thinking, Kim said. He, his wife and their daughter now plan to return to the Valley.

THIS GONG, which was brought from Korea and hangs outside the temple founded and built by the late Han San Lee, is struck at regular intervals by the monks who live in the temple dormitories. The Buddhist belief is that, as the gong rings, it will awaken people to a new state of awareness and enlightenment.

Kim expects to become active in the temple organization and to become a student of Buddhist beliefs.

That is part of the legacy of a man in whose honor several thousand people gathered daily last week in Korea. In the garden of the temple that he considered his greatest life work, he died as simply as he had come to live — while pulling a tree root out of the ground.

Farewell to Carmel

A FAREWELL note should properly be at the end of the column, I suppose. However, inasmuch as the exigencies of space sometimes result in the last paragraphs being deposited on the production room floor, I am putting it here.

This is, in fact, the last column I will write for the Pine Cone/Outlook. I want to say a heartfelt "thank you" to all those who contributed information about their own business (or the businesses of others) and the many readers who wrote or called or stopped me on the street to say they enjoyed reading it. I'm not sure I liked being called by one of those readers "the Walter Winchell of Carmel," but I can think of worse sobriquets.

My thanks do not extend to the three people who threatened to sue me — not for inaccuracies, as it happened, but because they didn't like seeing what they said in print. I did appreciate the support of our editor, Bob Miskimon, in those instances, as in everything. Not only did he reassure me that it was the paper that would be sued, not me personally, but he was sure they wouldn't really do it. They didn't.

Why is this my last column? I am about to take off to do something I have always wanted to do: experience the change of seasons in New England. It just seemed that now was the time.

Montpelier, Vermont, is the place, because the family of a Carmel friend lives there and because it sounds like just the kind of place I would have chosen anyway. It is a small town of 8,000 near the Green Mountains. And it is the state capital, so perhaps there will be interesting activities and job opportunities.

There are always tugs at one's heart when such a change is made — even a temporary change. I will miss family and friends in California. I will miss Carmel and the ocean and its other joys. But I'll be back to renew all those pleasures, probably early in December.

It is nice to know that I am leaving the column in good hands. Just when I was putting my plans together, I met Nancy Hills, a young woman who was visiting a neighbor. She was thinking about moving from Southern California, and, when I found that she was a well-educated, well-traveled writer, I suggested she talk to Bob Miskimon about a job — my job — at the Pine Cone/Outlook.

He had the good sense to offer her the job, and she to accept it. She is particularly interested in writing science fiction, which may not be too far off the track. At any rate, it will be her own column — so it will be different. More objective, perhaps, and from the viewpoint of a relative newcomer to our shores. I will leave it to Nancy to tell you more about herself next week.

I haven't told our editor about this, as yet, but I do plan to write at least one letter from Vermont which I hope he may consider fit to print. Until then, thank you all again for your support and encouragement during the past four and one-half years. Aloha! (Or whatever the Vermonter's equivalent is — I'll let you know.)

NATALIE TUNNEY, owner-manager of Norberg Travel Service, is moving to a new Dolores Street location with a new name — "The Travel Brokers." (Michael Gardner photo.)

CHANGE IS CONSTANT

I can be certain of one thing: the business beat will continue to be lively, whether I am here to record it or not. In just one week:

- There's a prospective new owner for Coffee Beans and Tea Leaves in the Court of the Golden Bough. Raymond Molyneux is in the process of moving from Southern California, according to present owner Robert Koplan.

- Norberg Travel Service is moving just 60 feet north of its present Dolores Street location. Owner/manager Natalie Tunney also requested — and received — approval for a name change, to The Travel Brokers. Business license board member Sandy Swain commented that she was sorry to see the Norberg name go, but understood. The business was formerly owned by Carmel's well-known Gunnar Norberg, former mayor and still-active citizen. The Travel Brokers will replace Guy's Establishment.

- Douglas Stevens amended his original business license application for "Feeling Great," the health food store on San Carlos Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues. It's to be The Pasta Palate, and Stevens will sell fresh pasta wholesale to local stores and restaurants, also retail "take-home." He explained that he has been a resident of Carmel since February of 1982 and that he came here with the intent to develop such a business. "I was guided to Carmel and I want to have a business that is for local residents and people who work in town," he said.

In addition to pasta, he will have bread, cheeses and sauces available, but nothing — he assured the business license board — that would be eaten outside on the street. "No sandwiches!" he said. And no cooking on the premises: "My equipment includes a mixer, cutter, kneader and ravioli machine." Said one member of the board: "I can hardly wait!"

- After nearly two years, the name Adams is back on the shop known for that length of time as Extraordinary Things. Richard Scudder, who took over the Fifth Avenue shop owned by Robert and Royal Adams, has moved from Carmel. Adams Too will continue to offer antiques in great variety — that is, if questions about the need for a review by the planning commission are ironed out to everyone's satisfaction. As a non-conforming use, the shop may come under the city's new zoning laws if and when building owner Ray Freschi decides to make any changes. In the meantime, Royal Adams will oversee the shop with the help of a new manager. Customers may get a bonus — news about the Adamses' two foals at their new Carmel Valley ranch!

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

"Off-price" continued to be a problem for the business license board at its Aug. 23 meeting. Once again, T.R. Sanford's application for a license under his own name was continued for two weeks.

The issue is whether or not the San Carlos Street shop — previously known as Cameo Fashions — is now a discount store under new owner Sanford. Board members objected to Sanford's advertising that used the words "off-price" and "discount." At the Aug. 23 meeting, a number of Carmel business owners and several citizens spoke against the general concept of discount shops in Carmel. Sanford attempted to reassure the board and said he didn't know he was offending anyone. "These sentiments are new to me," he said. "We'll eliminate the reference to discount; we don't need it."

But the board was not mollified and voted unanimously to continue the hearing on Sanford's application to Sept. 13. The ultimate question, to be asked of the city attorney before that date, is: how specific can the city be as to the wording of the store's business license?

DOES BUD HAVE A PUB?

The question of a license for Bud Allen's planned restaurant/bar in Su Vecino Court was also postponed for two weeks. "We've had no additional information from Allen," City Administrator Doug Schmitz said. The issue in this case is whether Allen would be willing to put more emphasis on food sales than on alcoholic beverage sales. Or, what is a pub?

THE END OF THE STORY

Several weeks ago, when I wrote about the non-diet "diet" cookies sold locally, I neglected to report the good side of the story. The end of the story — for me — is to be found at Linda's Cookie Basket in Carmel Valley.

Right there in her own small bakery at Robinson Canyon and Carmel Valley roads, Linda Sanders produces some delectable cookies, including one fine diet cookie with variations (nuts, carob or semi-sweet chips). They are also available at some local grocery stores, although you will pay more for them there and you won't get to smell them freshly baked.

Linda's diet cookies are a believable and verifiable 69 calories each. They can be frozen, and, if you leave them out too long, a few minutes in the oven will restore that just-baked taste.

In spite of all the activity at Linda's corner, behind the Farm Center Country Store, construction on the intersection will not close her down. In fact, since the workers on that project have discovered her cookies, business has been booming!

SUN PEBBLES

It's a new and different business for Carmel — one that doesn't take up a lot of space but does cover considerable territory. That's Sun Pebbles, Don Yule's wholesale clothing enterprise.

Don told the business license board he will operate Sun Pebbles out of his Mission Street home in May Court. He described his application as "a very restrictive one — just to have my office there, to receive mail and use a desk and phone." He added: "No sign, no customers, no warehouse, no shipping, no retail sales!" and his application was approved.

It's a relatively new business for Don, too. As a pioneer for Century 21, he was involved for many years in opening the Midwest for that real estate franchise firm. He had lived in Carmel for a while and just recently returned. There isn't any question about why: "Home! Nesting! Where I had to be!" he exclaimed.

Don has family connections in Pebble Beach, Monterey and Carmel Valley. However, he insists that he would have made his home here anyway. "It's the beauty spot of the world," he said. And there's a fine climate for tennis, his favorite outdoor activity.

He discovered his new business interest during a sojourn in Florida and felt it was a natural for California. Sun Pebbles deals in hand-printed clothing, using artists from around the country. The clothing is not in Carmel stores. "Not yet, but soon," according to Don Yule.

THE BIG BASH IS COMING

The Carmel Business Association annual barbecue is scheduled for Sept. 22 at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley. There will be a steak dinner and dancing to John Keller's Jazz Band. A silent auction, too, will be featured.

CLEARING MY DESK

Only in Carmel? A Japanese couple, complete with cameras, walking along Ocean Avenue and conversing in French.

And overheard another day: "Do you want to cross the street? We've seen this side twice."

And still another pair of tourists (how can I tell?): "No, that's not it. It was a gift shop, and I'm sure it was in a little courtyard."

***

Have you noticed those fluorescent-orange dots on the streets and sidewalks of our business district? It occurred to me to wonder if the Carmel Planning Commission had approved the color, and the placement.

Seeing a Dolores Street businessman at the doorway of his shop, I stopped to ask if he knew what they were for. "The telephone company put them there," he said. "So they'll know where their lines are."

Oh.

PARTING SHOTS

As a sometime proofreader for the Pine Cone/Outlook, I am supposed to mind my p's and q's and those of our writers. And also the apostrophes therewith. So when I have been walking around the residential area of this city, a daily delight, I have sometimes winced when I have seen punctuation on the signs that grace some homes. As I depart, I can no longer resist a brief statement on the subject.

If your name is Smith and you want to say that this is your house, there are several ways it can be done correctly. "The Smiths" — meaning "The Smiths live here" is one. Another is to have your sign read "The Smiths'" meaning "This is the Smiths' house." The implication is that more than one Smith lives here. It is technically incorrect to use "The Smith's" unless in fact you are a smith — a metalworker — and this is your home.

I have said my say. If you still want to leave your house sign as it is (and a number of those in Carmel do use names on their signs incorrectly), be my guest. I just had to tell it like (as) it is.

While I'm at it: perhaps you don't, but a lot of people do. I mean over-use the word "gentleman" when "man" would do nicely. The most recent example of that in my book is a police officer (not one from Carmel) who was interviewed on TV about a crime that had just occurred. Said he: "The gentleman held up this subject, hit him over the head and ran into a neighbor's yard, where he was apprehended."

Gentleman? Indeed! It may be that police officers think they have to bend over backwards to avoid casting aspersions on anyone, but that's too much. I hear it (and sometimes the word "lady" instead of "woman") in other situations where it shouldn't be necessary to give the person the benefit of the doubt.

Okay, I'll go quietly.

SYMPHONY GUILD BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

Bridge players are welcome to sign up for the annual bridge tournament sponsored by the Monterey County Symphony Guild.

"This tournament is just for fun for the average player who likes to compete but not too seriously," said Rosemary and George Blackstone of Carmel, chairpersons of this year's tournament. The tournament is run at a leisurely pace from October to April at times mutually convenient to the participating teams.

Each team plays matches of 24 hands each with five other teams. Generally a match takes about two hours to play and many teams find Sunday afternoon a good time for a match. The matches are at the homes of team members.

The chairpersons will help players find partners and will assist in forming groups of six teams each.

"Some teams like to continue with the same group each year. Others, like us, enjoy the adventure of playing against different teams each year. We will try to accommodate each team's preference wherever possible," the Blackstones said.

Teams may be of either sex or mixed. Those who want to sign up may do so by calling the symphony office at 624-8511, or the Blackstones after office hours at 625-0463. The entrance fee of $15 per player is a contribution to the Symphony Association and is tax-deductible. There will be a playoff of the high teams in May at the Beach and Tennis Club.

OBITUARIES

Richard Collins

A remembrance ceremony took place Aug. 22 at the home of Richard Donnell Collins, widely-known horseman and former director of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center who died Aug. 20 at his home in Pebble Beach. He was 76.

Born in Long Beach Jan. 7, 1908, he attended the University of California at Los Angeles and moved to Pebble Beach in 1928 to become athletic director of the new Douglas School, now Robert Louis Stevenson School.

He served as director of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center from the 1940s until Jan. 1, 1980 and was widely known in the United States equestrian world for his training of youngsters and young adults in all phases of horsemanship. Collins Polo Field in Pebble Beach was named in his honor in the late 1960s by S.F.B. Morse, the late founder of Del Monte Properties Co., predecessor of the Pebble Beach Co.

With the threat of World War II in 1941 and the difficulty of maintaining horse stables, he combined the school's stables with the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center and became its director. In the pre-war years he also had been head of equestrian events at the old Hotel Del Monte, now the site of the Naval Postgraduate School.

He served as manager of the U.S. Equestrian Team's Three-Day Event Team in the 1955 Pan-American Games in Chicago and he took the Three-Day USET horses to the Rome Olympics in 1960.

When he was director, the Pebble Beach Center trained riders and horses and conducted three-day events for national trials which produced several Olympic contenders. The center also started the first Pony Club on the West Coast after the movement was brought to America from England in the 1950s.

During his years with the Pebble Beach Center, he also was active full time with Del Monte Realty Co. and continued with them until his retirement from the center.

Survivors include his wife, the former Sheila McDonnell Cooley, whom he married in 1972, and five stepchildren, Leslie, Pierce, Sheila, Sean and Mark Cooley. His first wife, Marguerite, died in 1970 and his son, Michael, died in 1980.

The Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the United States Combined Training Association, 292 Bridge St., South Hamilton, Mass. 01982, or to the Cancer Wellness Center, 261 Eldorado St., Suite 202, Monterey.

Rolf Ullestad

Memorial services took place Aug. 22 at the Church of the Wayfarer for Dr. Rolf J. Ullestad, an oral surgeon and professor of dentistry for many years who died Aug. 19 at Carmel Convalescent Hospital. He was 85.

Born Jan. 28, 1898 in Chicago, he graduated from Northwestern University Dental School and later taught there for 10 years. A Navy veteran of World War I and an Army veteran of World War II, he attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The health picture for older Americans has been growing increasingly better in recent years. Among the happy statistics proving this is the fact that the death rate from coronary heart disease among U.S. residents over the age of 65 has been dropping approximately two percent a year since the late 1960s. The mortality rate from stroke has been declining between three and five percent a year, which more than offsets a slight increase in deaths from cancer. And the over-80 age group is proportionally the fastest-growing segment of our population.

*** The most widespread stereotype about aging is the belief that older people are forgetful. But psychologist Steven Zarit of the University of Southern California says that frequently-heard complaints from seniors about forgetfulness do not stand up to the scientific scrutiny of memory testing. "When a younger person misplaces his or her keys, it's no big deal," says the psychologist. "But when an older person does the same thing, it's taken as a sign of impending 'senility,' and it shouldn't be."

SERRA BICENTENNIAL BY MSGR. FRANCESWEBER

The professorial years

DURING THE 18 years that Fray Junipero Serra lived, worked and prayed at the Convento de San Francisco, Palma de Mallorca, books and study dominated the major portion of his time.

Late in 1731, Serra received tonsure and the minor orders, the first steps to ordination. Then came the copious classes in theology required for reception of the ministerial priesthood.

Serra was ordained deacon on Saint Patrick's Day in 1736, but the exact date of his advancement to priesthood is unrecorded. His biographer suggests that the event took place just prior to Christmas of 1737, when Serra had reached the prescribed canonical age.

Aware of his pedagogical talents, Serra's superiors singled him out to be a professor within the Seraphic Order. After passing the necessary examinations, Fray Junipero Serra was awarded the coveted title "lector of philosophy."

Serra began his professorial career early in 1740. Fortunately, one of his students kept a careful written transcript of Serra's lectures that is still extant. It numbered no fewer than 808 pages!

In 1743, a year after he received his doctorate, Serra was named to the Chair of Scotistic Theology at the Lullian University. During his tenure in that prestigious assignment, Fray Junipero Serra took preaching appointments in various parts of Mallorca.

Serra was as accomplished at preaching as he was at teaching. Sprung from the country soil himself, he never lost the ability to touch his simple hearers. Generally, he preached in the Mallorcan dialect, which was akin to Catalan.

In June of 1743, Serra was singularly honored by being invited to preach on the Feast of Corpus Christi in Palma's historic cathedral. That event was traditionally among the more memorable of local celebrations, and only the most outstanding speakers were asked to participate.

Carmel planners to have experimental study meet

THE CARMEL Planning Commission — faced with lengthy agendas and little time to get all of the information necessary to make decisions — plans to begin an experimental study session a week before its regularly scheduled monthly meetings.

The first of these meetings, open to the public, will be at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 12, at city hall. The meeting will be preceded by a 3 p.m. tour of inspection of proposed projects on the agenda.

Ironically, the September agenda for the planning commission is one of its lightest in recent months. The topics include design review of a few homes, a change in color for an awning and a proposal by the city to paint the public works and police department buildings a "buttercup beige."

No formal action will be taken at these study sessions, planner Brian Roseth told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The commission will use the meeting time to obtain information from applicants and ask questions of staff. Action is expected to be taken at the regularly-scheduled planning commission meeting on the third Wednesday of the month, Roseth said.

All applications, except for signs, that require planning commission approval will be reviewed at the study sessions. These study meetings are scheduled for the second Wednesday of the month.

The study session will serve several different purposes, Roseth said.

Previously, most of the applications were first considered by the design review committee. The committee could spend time with the applicant and get answers to any questions.

But when the full planning commission convened there simply was not enough time "for this kind of give and take," Roseth said.

"A lot of questions and answers are exchanged which gives the committee a lot of information," he continued. "The planning commission is more formal and there is less dialogue. The rest of the planning commission does not receive the same benefit of information and they are disadvantaged."

County to tackle plans for Spanish Bay, ranch

Committee recommendations that could determine the future of two major projects in Monterey County will be presented to the Monterey County Planning Commission Wednesday, Sept. 12, at the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas.

Commissioners will review the Spanish Bay project in Pebble Beach at 10:45 a.m. and then, at 11:30 a.m., tackle the proposed Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, which includes the proposed 3,800-unit Rancho San Carlos residential development.

Both agenda items are scheduled as public hearings.

Spanish Bay and the area plan both have been before commissioners several times. The most recent meeting on the items was Aug. 8.

Planners have formed two separate committees to review each issue and make recommendations to the full commission. Those recommendations were unavailable by press deadline.

The Pebble Beach Co. wants to build a 270-room hotel, golf course and 80-unit condominium project at Spanish Bay, an old mined-out sand plant inside Del Monte Forest near the Asilomar Conference Grounds in Pacific Grove.

The site is about 236 acres.

Another committee is to report on recommendations for the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan.

The most controversial section of the area plan is the allowable density for a proposed 3,800-unit residential complex at Rancho San Carlos, a 20,000-acre ranch south of Carmel Valley Road that generally stretches from near Highway 1 east to Carmel Valley Village.

The development also would include a hotel and golf course. The owners, members of the Oppenheimer family, have promised to provide access off Rio Road rather than Carmel Valley Road. And the project would provide its own water supply and sewage treatment plant.

But there is some question about just how much development should be allowed on the property.

The now-disbanded Citizens Advisory Committee for the Carmel Valley Master Plan has urged the county to allow a density of one unit per 20 acres, which would allow a 2,000-home development.

The committee discussed the project even though Rancho San Carlos is not within the Carmel Valley Master Plan boundaries because members believed the project would have an impact on Carmel Valley.

Additionally, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association has proposed a one-unit-per-40-acres density, which would restrict the development to about 500 homes.

The John Biggs Consort is noted for a repertoire that spans seven centuries, from medieval dance music to contemporary works. The group has recorded an album,

Fleet blessed, foods served

Santa Rosalia Festival set Sunday

THE MONTEREY fishing fleet gathers near Old Fisherman's Wharf for the traditional blessing, part of the annual Santa Rosalia Festival. From 12:30 to 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9, Old Monterey will be revived as entertainment and Italian food specialties are served.

The Festival begins at 10 a.m. with a parade down Webster Street to the Custom House Plaza in Monterey. Entertainment is free.

THE MONTEREY fishing fleet will be blessed, and the afternoon filled with entertainment and Italian food specialties, during the traditional Santa Rosalia Festival on Sunday, Sept. 9.

The celebration begins at 10 a.m. with a parade of floats, bands and marching units on Webster Street. The reverie will wind through downtown Monterey to the Custom House Plaza, where The Most Rev. Thaddeus Shubsda, Bishop of Monterey, will celebrate an outdoor Mass at 11 a.m.

At approximately noon, a procession will form and travel to Old Fisherman's Wharf. Fishermen wearing traditional tasselled stocking caps will carry the statue of Santa Rosalia to the end of the wharf.

There Bishop Shubsda will embark on a fishing boat to ask blessings for the fleet and for sports boats in the harbor. The Queen of the Santa Rosalia Festival will lay a wreath of flowers on the ocean in memory of fishermen who have died at sea.

After the blessing of the fleet, an afternoon of entertainment will follow. Italian delicacies, including pizza, sausage, spaghetti, fried squid, and cannoli, will be served from 12:30 to 6 p.m.

Entertainers will include vocal groups, dancers and bands. With the exception of food or souvenir purchases, all activities are free. The festival is sponsored by the Italian Heritage Society of the Monterey Peninsula. For more information, call Frank Nuovo, 373-3051, Charles Della Sala, 373-8451, or Jerome Lucido, 372-2665.

Monterey Jazz Festival announces added artists

SAXIST Al Cohn has joined the Monterey Jazz Festival's 27th annual line-up, according to Monterey Jazz Festival General Manager Jimmy Lyons.

Cohn will substitute for his longtime co-leader Zoot Sims, who is unable to perform at this year's festival, Sept. 14, 15 and 16, due to a scheduling conflict.

Cohn will perform on Friday evening in the "Saxophone Summit" with Benny Carter, James Moody, "Lockjaw" Davis, Mundell Lowe, Shelly Manne, Hank Jones, George Duvivier and Clark Terry. Also on the Friday bill are Ernestine Anderson, Bobby McFerrin, the California High School All Star Jazz Band and Lionel Hampton and his Orchestra.

Cohn's substitution for Sims will not affect the Saturday afternoon blues show featuring the Johnny Otis Rhythm and Blues Reunion, Kathy Carlile, Eric Bobo, John Chrisley, Jr., and Etta James; the Saturday evening show featuring Batucaje, Denny Zeitlin/Charlie Haden/Peter Donald, Full Swing, Richie Cole and Alto Madness, Janis Siegel and the Tito Puente All-Stars; or Sunday afternoon's lineup showcasing the California High School All-Star Band, Bill Berry, Clark Terry, Slide Hampton, the Shelly Manne Trio and Transit West. However, in Sunday evening's closing show, Cohn will replace Sims in the All-Star Finale. Also on that evening's program will be co-host Billy Eckstine, Ann Patterson's Maiden Voyage and the TubaJazz Consort.

Cohn will also perform Friday evening in the festival Night Club, sharing the bill with Bobby McFerrin, Ernestine Anderson, Richie Cole, James Moody, the Vince La-teano Trio, the Smith Dobson Trio, the T-Bills, Clark Terry and Slide Hampton.

Other artists who will appear throughout the weekend on the Garden Stage and in the Night Club — both on the festival grounds — include the Shelly Manne Trio, Full Swing, Janis Siegel, Mark Naftalin's Rhythm and Blues Revue, Bruce Forman, the Mark Levine Quintet, Transit West and Denny Zeitlin/Charlie Haden/Peter Donald among others.

Grounds admission tickets to the Monterey Jazz Festival provide the bearer access to both the Garden Stage and Night Club entertainment and all other areas of the festival grounds, with the exception of the Main Arena.

Beyond the Fringe

Beyond the Fringe, an irreverent British comedy revue written by Alan Bennett, Peter Cook, Jonathan Miller and Dudley Moore, begins a West Coast tour at Monterey Peninsula College at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Theatre.

Having premiered in 1962 in London, the production has just enjoyed critical and box office success in a two-year run in San Francisco under the direction of Peter Nyberg, who directed the MPC summer production of A Flea in Her Ear.

The revue is considered a forerunner of the well-known Monty Python style of humor and features five performers — Clive Chafer, Scott Rankine, Philip Sales, Tracy Thornell, and Brian Sherman at the piano. The cast lampoons nearly every aspect of society, from religion, politics and the American way of life to Scotland Yard, Shakespeare and the English way of life.

Skits range from T.V. interviews to sermons to situations, including one called Bollard, which involves the making of a cigarette commercial by four mincing queens. Another satirizes a variety of Shakespearean productions in "So That's the Way You Like It." Piano interludes accompany and connect the skits in compatible musical humor.

Tickets are $6, available at the door or in advance through MPC Community Services, 646-4051. MPC is at 980 Fremont, Monterey.

The Au Pair Man

A rough Irish bill collector named Hartigan is conscripted into the service of an English lady, Elizabeth, in this comedy at the Studio Theatre Restaurant.

Starring Jim Webber and Nita Raichart, The Au Pair Man offers a kind of reverse Pygmalion plot in that the lady tries to teach her helper how to be a gentleman.

The comedy continues Thursdays through Sundays until Sept. 29.

Dinner is served at 7 p.m. and curtain is at 8:30 p.m., except Sundays, when dinner and show are one hour earlier. The Studio Theatre Restaurant is on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Carmel. Tickets: 624-1661.

Betrayal

Infidelity and its entanglements are explored in the California Repertory Theatre production of Harold Pinter's Betrayal.

Directed by Howard Malpas, Betrayal concludes its run at Cal Rep this weekend. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Thursday through Sunday, Sept. 6-9. There will be a 2 p.m. matinee Saturday, Sept. 8. The theater is at 125 Ocean View Blvd., Pacific Grove. Tickets: 372-4373.

Puss in Boots

The Naval Postgraduate School Little Theater will present its summer offering, Puss in Boots.

The show debuts at 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 7. There will be matinees at 2 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 8-9, in addition to a 7 p.m. show Saturday, Sept. 8. It is presented in King Hall Auditorium at the Naval Postgraduate School, Sloat and Del Monte avenues, Monterey.

Local sculptures shown at Third Dimension '84

'THIRD DIMENSION '84,' a multi-media exhibition of new sculpture by members of the Carmel Art Association, opens with a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 7. The CAA galleries are on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues in Carmel.

TINY Mama and Baby Sea Otter, an original by Beth Garcia of Carmel, consists of bronze animals atop a polished agate base. It is two and one-quarter inches across.

This not-for-profit group operates the largest artist-owned gallery in Central California. Through Oct. 3, the galleries will be filled with works of varied size, media and theme by local sculptors.

Represented artists will include Jayne Amason of Carmel, who completes bronze figurative works; Wah Chang of Carmel Valley, a former Disney artist who now creates animal figures in bronze, and Bert Conaghan of Monterey, a stone carver.

Local sculptor Jesse W. Corsaut works in bronze; Douglas Downs of Pacific Grove executes bronze Western-themed art; and Beth Garcia of Carmel produces animals and objects on a tiny scale.

Dennis Handy of Carmel Valley produces surrealistic works in stone and marble. Randy Puckett of Prunedale is noted for his exacting renderings of marine life in bronze; Suzanne Sable of Pacific Grove is a French-born bronze sculptor.

Laminated abstract wood forms will be shown by William W. Smith of Carmel Valley. Isabel Tavernetti of Pebble Beach creates clay and papier mache works while Kenneth Wiese of Carmel, who is a Carmel Middle School teacher, works in bronze and stone.

Various sculpture techniques will be demonstrated between 4 and 6 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8. Refreshments will be served. The Carmel Art Association galleries are open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

COILED OCTOPUS, created in bronze by Monterey stonecarver Bert Conaghan, is part of the Third Dimension '84 sculpture show opening this weekend at the Carmel Art Association Galleries.

'IMAGES OF China: East and West,' an exhibition of 21 Chinese posters and 74 photographs taken by Westerners, opens at the Marjorie Evans Gallery at Sunset Center this weekend.

Organized and sponsored by Metromedia, Inc., Los Angeles, the exhibition was developed for circulation by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service.

It juxtaposes the goals and aspirations of the Chinese government with the current living conditions of the people. China's drive to equal other world powers in science, education, agriculture and industry has fostered a mass communications blitz through the medium of the poster.

Posters in the United States, both decorative and functional, adorn bedroom walls, subways and buildings.

The answer to this communication problem has long been the poster, which fosters the government goals for the people in terms of education, population control, agriculture, science, entertainment, industry, crafts, transportation, daily life, communication and medicine.

While in China, Metromedia, Inc. Art Director Len Rubenstein collected a large number of these graphics from walls along the streets, factories and schools. Rubenstein and James Caldwell, Metromedia director of photography, have documented with photographs the realities that correspond to the idealistic posters, addressing their importance within the context of the Chinese culture.

Admission is free to the gallery, located at Eighth Avenue and San Carlos Street, Carmel. It is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. The exhibit runs from Monday, Sept. 10, through Oct. 4. For more information, call 624-3996.

Mobius Strip celebrated in stone, marble and wood

TRANSLUCENT renderings of the curious "Mobius strip" — a surface with only one side — have been sculpted in marble by Carmelite Edwin Lombard. The artist, a Professor Emeritus in Theater Arts, began sculpting at age 54. Now 73, he has won several sculpture awards.

A collection of Lombard's works can be viewed at Highlands Gallery of Sculpture, three miles south of Carmel on Highway 1. Various interpretations of the subject that has fascinated the sculptor this past year — the Mobius strip — will be included. He has executed these in bronze, wood and marble.

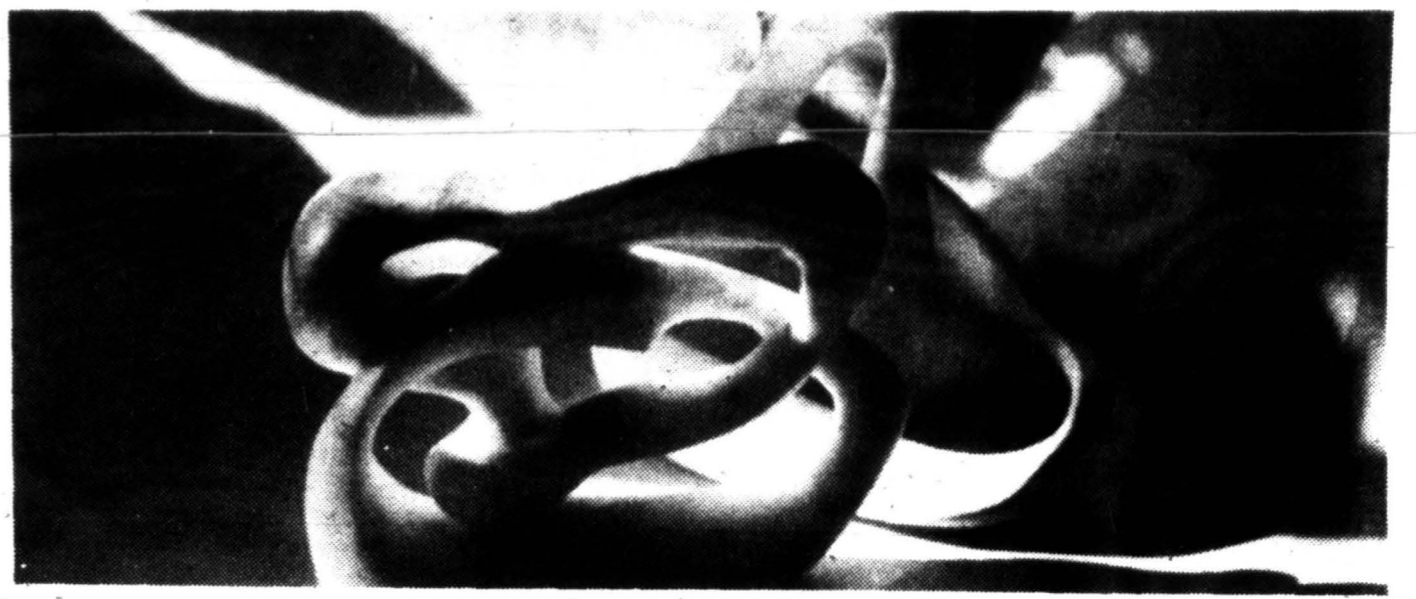

Lombard retired to Carmel in 1973 from Fresno State University, where he taught radio, television and speech. He holds a B.A. in English from Oberlin College, an M.A. in political science from Columbia University, an M.A. in speech from Cornell University and a Ph.D. in theater from Cornell.

In addition to being retired from the state university system, he is retired as a lieutenant commander from the Navy, with 22 years of active and reserve duty.

The artist has worked in a variety of media. In 1980, he won first place in wood sculpture at the California State Fair and Exposition in Sacramento. Titled Ebony, his winning work depicted a nude female torso. The sculpture was a two-toned piece Lombard carved from a 175-pound block of ebony wood.

Lombard is an artist-member of the Pacific Grove Art Center. For more information about his Highlands Gallery of Sculpture show, call 624-0535.

MOBIUS, an intertwined strip sculpted of translucent marble by Edwin Lombard of Carmel, can be viewed at the Highlands Gallery of Sculpture. Other Lombard works designed in various materials are displayed at the gallery, three miles south of Carmel on Highway 1.

ROUNDUP

Wilderness area named for Adams

More than 100 acres of an area to be preserved under the proposed California Wilderness Bill will be named in honor of Carmel conservationist and photographer Ansel Adams, who died April 22.

The Ansel Adams Wilderness, as it will be named, includes portions of the existing San Joaquin and Minarets wilderness areas, according to the Friends of Photography newsletter.

The Wilderness Bill, which Adams supported, appeared before the Energy Committee Aug. 1 after two years of active negotiation. If passed, it will preserve a total of 1.8 million acres of California wilderness.

The tribute to Adams, added to the proposal after his death, recognizes his environmental contributions as well as his photographs, which he used as weapons to preserve nature.

Instructor discusses textiles

Monterey Peninsula College instructor Diane Bower will discuss "Textiles — Their Handling, Care and Preservation"

BACKGAMMON

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 6-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

Obviously, you bear off one man with the six. The only question is how to play the two.

You may move from your 3-point, leaving men on the 6-point and 1-point for your next roll (if any); or you can move from the 6-point, leaving men on your 4-point and 3-point. Which position gives you a better chance to get both men off?

With men on the 6-point and 1-point, you can bear both off if you roll 6-6, 5-5, 4-4, 3-3, or 2-2 (five of the six possible doublets) or 6-5, 5-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1 or 1-6. In all, you can get both men off with 15 of the 36 possible rolls.

If you have men on the 4-point and 3-point, you can get both men off if you roll the same five doublets or 6-5, 5-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 3-6, 5-4, 4-5, 5-3, 3-5, 4-3 or 3-4. The total is 17 of the 36 possible rolls.

The advantage is not overwhelming, but don't sniff at 2 out of 36 possibilities. It's better to have 5½ percent in your favor than against you.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1.00 plus a stamped, self-addressed No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of Los Angeles Times, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Works by Fink, Goldberg and Norfleet

Friends' show documents America

UNTITLED photograph by Larry Fink is taken from the series, The Sabatine Family, Martins Creek, PA, 1977-83, from the American Social Documents exhibition at The Friends of Photography in Carmel.

WORKS OF three social documentary photographers — Larry Fink, Jim Goldberg and Barbara Norfleet — will be displayed in The Friends of Photography Gallery Sept. 7 through Oct. 14.

An opening reception will take place 8 to 10 p.m., Friday, Sept. 7, in the Gallery in Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. The public is invited. The Gallery is open daily from 1 to 5 p.m.

This exhibition presents the work of three artists who depict, through greatly divergent approaches, specific population groups within the national social fabric. Barbara Norfleet first realized how few candid images of the upper class existed when she was establishing a photographic archive of American social history at Harvard University. While most social classes were represented in the collection by both candid and formal images, she found that the elite were depicted in only the most formal type of studio portraits.

Larry Fink's photographic work shows no class preference; he has photographed elite social gatherings such as museum openings as well as New York City youth gangs. The images on exhibit at The Friends Gallery depict the activities of a blue-collar family in Martin's Creek, Pennsylvania, and represent the other end of the economic spectrum from Norfleet's subjects.

Fink has never seen himself as an observer of people and their lives; he is a photographer who works with people. This is clearly indicated in his photographs of the Sabatine family. He has followed their activities for several years, photographing rituals such as preparations for a child's first communion and family birthday parties. Using harsh flash lighting that gives his prints a theatrical quality, Fink creates images that display intimate expressions of family life.

Forming a bridge between the work of Norfleet and Fink is Jim Goldberg's visual and verbal study of both the poor and privileged people of San Francisco. In this project, begun in 1978, the artist combines portraits, frequently of more than one person, with remarks written by his subjects in their own handwriting. Through these highly revealing portraits, he demystifies his subjects' lives by challenging society's stereotypes of wealth and poverty.

The autobiographical statements are selected from longer texts composed by the people photographed and are chosen to either solidify or radically alter the viewer's initial response to the image. Goldberg feels that: "The end product is a statement on the dreams and dilemmas we all share in today's complex world, with implications for larger social, philosophical and esthetic issues."

Jim Goldberg was born in New Haven, Conn., in 1953. He received a B.A. degree from Fairhaven College in Bellingham, Wash., in 1975 and an M.F.A. degree in photography from the San Francisco Art Institute in 1979. The 1983 recipient of The Friends of Photography Ruttenberg Fellowship, he was awarded a National Endowment for the Arts Photographer's Fellowship in 1980. Goldberg will serve as a visiting professor at the University of Massachusetts in Boston during the 1984-85 academic year.

Born in Brooklyn in 1941, Larry Fink studied photography with Lisette Model. He now lives in Martin's Creek, Penn., and teaches at Lehigh University and Muhlenberg College. He received Guggenheim Fellowships in 1976 and 1979 and an NEA Photographer's Fellowship in 1978. A book of his photographs, Social Graces, is to be published in the fall of 1984.

Barbara Norfleet was born in Lakewood, N.J., in 1926. She received her B.A. degree in 1947 from Swarthmore College, Penn., and her Ph.D. in social relations from Harvard University in 1951. She became interested in photography while a lecturer in sociology in the late 1960s, and since 1972 she has been the curator of photography at Harvard's Carpenter Center for Visual Arts. Norfleet is a 1984 recipient of a Guggenheim Foundation Fellowship.

Mexican pride captured in Carmel Valley show

THIS SUMMER Ray Lindsay pursued the touchy art of photographing the people of Mexico.

"In Oaxaca especially, you don't want to walk down the street and just snap photos," Lindsay explained. "It's a very superstitious region. People think you're trying to steal their soul."

Lindsay, for 14 years a familiar bearded face behind the counter of the Carmel Valley Post Office where he works as a clerk, discovered he possesses a penchant for picture taking. A black and white photograph Lindsay took in July won first prize in a "People" category at the Monterey County Fair.

Through the encouragement of friends, Lindsay will open his first one-man show this week. "A View of Mexico Today" will be exhibited from Saturday, Sept. 8, through Sept. 27 at the Daniel David Derr Design Photography Gallery, 10 E. Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel Valley.

Mexico has been Lindsay's photographic subject of choice since he was a student at Mexico City College in the late '50s. In those days he used a small Brownie, later acquiring a "little Olympus Pen" half-frame 35mm

PHOTOGRAPHER Ray Lindsay captured this scene during his July trip to Mexico. "A View of Mexico Today" opens Saturday, Sept. 8, at the Design Photography Gallery in the Village, Carmel Valley.

during a Hong Kong visit. "I kick myself for not keeping my negatives from that Olympus Pen."

Lindsay was able to see a lot of the world as a member of the Air Force and, later, the Merchant Marine. A camera went wherever he was stationed.

Lindsay settled on the Monterey Peninsula in the late '60s, but still found pleasure taking his family to Mexico and pursuing photography. His current goal, he said, is to document that country from border to border.

"When the show is done, I'm going to take a portfolio to the Mexican consulate in San Francisco and to the national railway office," Lindsay said. "I've tried to take photos from railroad cars, but without a piece of paper the doors are closed."

His portfolio is quite evenly divided between black and white and color work. "Mexico is so colorful, the color often tends to take over." Although an avid lensman, he does not do his own darkroom work. "My bag is really taking the picture, rather than playing with the negative."

Lindsay characterizes his work as photo-journalistic in both theme and method.

Because many Mexicans are camera-shy, he has minimal time to focus and shoot his Pentax K1000. If he hesitates, people will just turn away.

It isn't only Lindsay's cameras that are noticed in Mexico. On his right forearm is a tattooed eagle, on his left — a serpent. In Oaxaca, particularly, these symbols sacred to Mexicans pegged Lindsay as a curiosity.

"When I walk down a street, four or five times a day someone will lick their finger and try to touch my tattoos."

Lindsay explained that he is committed to capturing the pride of Mexico.

"I don't like to show poverty," he said. "I'll leave that to the Maryknoll sisters. I hope to make people want to go there on vacation. I'd like to cross the desert down into the heartland of Mexico. I definitely want amusement parks and cemeteries. There's a lot of emotion there."

And Mexico triggers an emotional response in Lindsay. "It's never failed that when I go to Mexico, I cry the first day. I just feel like this is my home. I've had a continuous love affair with Mexico. It's so open and so warm. I plan to retire there."
